SOX TIGERS BATTLE TO-DAY

BOSTON AMERICAN

VOL. 8—No. 181. Registered U. S. Patent Office BOSTON, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1911. PRICE ONE CENT.

NIGHT EXTRA FIFTH EDITION

DENIES HE WALKED BY MOONLIGHT

"Lovers' Lane" and "moonlight night" were mentioned in cross-examination when the double divorce suit between Edward W. Mitchell, clerk of the Medford Board of Aldermen, and Ina Pelton Mitchell of Medford was resumed before Judge Fessenden in the Middlesex Superior court at East Cambridge to-day.

General Charles W. Bartlett, counsel for Mrs. Mitchell, continued the cross-examination of Mitchell. The name of a "Miss Gray" was mentioned.

"I knew Miss Gray in the early nineties," said Mitchell, "as a friend of my and other in Boston. Sometimes we walked up together from the North Station."

Q.—Did you ever go walking with her on Fulton street, Medford? A.—No.

Q.—Do you know a Lovers' Lane in Medford? A.—There used to be a street called that.

Q.—Did you ever walk with her on Lovers' Lane? A.—No.

Q.—Ever go walking with her on a moonlight night? A.—No, I'm sure I didn't.

Fifteen Women Witnesses.

Mr. Mitchell is suing for divorce on the grounds of unfaithfulness. In his opening day testimony he said his wife had known him down. Mrs. Mitchell preferred charges cruelty and abuse.

In court to-day the three children of the couple sat, as they did yesterday, with their father, in the forward jury box. Fifteen women witnesses for Mr. Mitchell filled the rear jury box. Mrs. Mitchell sat in the bar enclosure with her husband. The suits are being tried together and the custody of the children is one of the points at issue.

Court opened at 9:30, but taking of testimony was delayed for an hour while Judge Fessenden held a conference with Attorney Thomas W. Proctor for Mitchell and Attorney Bartlett for Mrs. Mitchell. Then General Bartlett began his continued cross-examination of Mitchell. After the "Lovers' Lane" and "moonlight walk" queries, General Bartlett shifted to questions concerning a certain letter.

Q.—Do you remember a letter relating to Miss Gray which you received about 1907? A.—I remember the letter, but I didn't receive it. My wife showed it to me.

Q.—Did you ever see it with my face reflected? A.—No.

More Letters Introduced.

Q.—Did you ever have a talk with your wife about the letter, in course of which you said to your knees? A.—No, sir!

Q.—Do you know if this letter was destroyed? A.—No, I don't know. My wife had it when I saw it last.

Other letters introduced by General Bartlett were identified by Mitchell as being in his handwriting. They were shown to the court, but not read. One of the letters have been introduced so far.

Mr. Mitchell testified that he could remember three occasions in particular on which Mrs. Mitchell was ill—one in October, 1907, another in January, 1909, October, 1909, and June, 1910. He said there were other times, but he could not recall the dates.

After questioning as to intimate relations in connection with the letter, General Bartlett and Mr. Mitchell, which caused spectators to smile.

Q.—Can you tell me any definite instances when your wife was drunk? A.—Please define intoxication.

General Bartlett said: "Well, the courts have wrestled with that question. Haven't you ever been intoxicated?"

"No," said Mitchell.

As to "Intoxication."

"Weren't you ever a little exhilarated?" persisted General Bartlett.

"One glass sometimes will make you feel a little good, you know," responded Mitchell, adding: "You will appreciate that."

General Bartlett: "Yes, that's right."

Four questions were ruled out by the court in June 3, 1910, when Mrs. Mitchell attempted to tell herself in gas, according to Mitchell's opening testimony.

Q.—What made you think your wife was drunk? A.—I think she attempted suicide by turning on the gas, and I found her in her closet empty.

Q.—Was she out jag, A.—It was delivered some time late in May. It was a gallon jug. Some might have been delivered to me that it was empty. My wife had kept it in the closet and the time.

Q.—Did you ever go to remove it? A.—No.

HEARING IN BULL CASE ON OCT. 17

ALFRED, Me., Sept. 19.—The hearing of the application of Attorney Ralph S. Bartlett of Boston to be appointed administrator of the estate of Mrs. Ole Bull, the widow of the great violinist, was to-day set down for October 17 in the Probate Court here. It is said the estate may be affected by such a sensational trial and in which much publicity was given as to Mrs. Bull's practice of Indian religions. The suit was brought by Mrs. Olea Vaughan, the daughter of Mrs. Bull, and she was the one, getting practically all of the estate, which is estimated at nearly $5000,0000. Mrs. Vaughan gets but as the court decided in her favor.

MARTIAL LAW FOR ALL SPAIN

MADRID, Sept. 19.—Martial law was formally declared throughout Spain to-day on account of the labor unrest and the threatened revolution against the government. All constitutional guarantees have been suspended.

The Federation of Labor unions to-day voted to call a general strike, tying up every industry, railroad and other institution employing labor throughout Spain. It was announced that the general walkout would be fixed later.

So turbulent has become the spirit of unrest, which had its inception in the general strikes in Bilbao, Saragossa, Havia Cadiz, Valencia, Seville and Ulpon, that universal martial law was considered imperative by the ministry.

Fierce fighting and bloodshed have marked the spread of the strike, the bitterness being intensified by the action of Premier Canalejas in declaring martial law in the local centres where the greatest unrest arose from the labor troubles.

That the anti-monarchists have massed their activities behind the curtain of labor difficulties is becoming more and more evident. Using this effective cloak to hide their real designs, Republican leaders have so influenced the workmen against King Alfonso and his government that a condition of actual revolution to-day appears to be only a matter of time.

The sinister designs of the radicals have become known to the authorities and 115 arrests had been made before noon to-day. Some of the prisoners were charged with political offences, while others were accused of inciting disorder.

The port of Vigo has filled up and constant fighting between mobs and soldiers is going on. All telegraph operators, railroad men, coal heavers, dock workers, cabmen and many other workmen have either struck or are threatening to go out.

The atmosphere in the labor war thrills with intrigue and revolution. A plot has been discovered for the assassination of General Weyler, known as "the butcher," who is in command of the troops in that section of the country. The republican press is boldly advocating civil war.

Clippings Showing How Public Won More Boats

The American printed stories of the public demands from the Nantasket steamboat Company and others, telling how the fight was won. Clippings from other Boston papers also show how the company finally consented to run more boats late in the season.

WON'T REPRINT DONAHUE'S NAME

The controversy between Secretary of State Langtry and Frank J. Donahue, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Secretary of State, over the misspelling of Donahue's name took a more pronounced turn to-day when Secretary Langtry flatly declared that the primary ballots already printed and on which the name of Mr. Donahue is misspelled will not be reprinted unless the court intervenes.

Donahue has intimated that a writ of mandamus may be sought to compel Secretary Langtry to have ballots printed with Donahue's name properly spelled. The whole controversy has arisen over the insertion of a "c" in Donahue's name. The name is spelled "Donahue" on the ballot.

Secretary Langtry to-day said:

"No, we shall not reprint the ballots, because the promise of the State printers simply cannot do the work. Mr. Donohue's name will be spelled correctly on seventeen-eighths of the ballots, and on one-eighth will it be spelled Donaghue. This office is constituted by law as the canvassing board of primary votes, and we shall count for Mr. Donahue all votes cast for him, whether they are cast for Frank J. Donahue or for Frank J. Donaghue."

CHINESE REBELLION BEING CRUSHED OUT

PEKIN, Sept. 19.—Prince Ching, head of the ministry, to-day received official advices from the south stating that the revolt in Szechuen were being overwhelmed by the imperial troops with great loss of life. No foreigners were reported killed or injured, and the food situation is assuming a brighter hue, although famine still stalks abroad.

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the houses, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

AMERICAN FAR AHEAD IN NEWS

There's a difference between a paper and a newspaper. The newspaper prints the news and the paper reprints it a day or two late.

The Boston AMERICAN is a newspaper, and no better evidence of this could be found than in the manner in which it gave its hundreds of thousands of readers the facts concerning the change in ownership of the Boston American League Baseball Club.

In the first place the AMERICAN printed exclusively the news that James R. McAleer had left Washington for the West, where he intended to secure money with which to purchase a big share of Red Sox stock. The papers followed up this story on the following day. When Messrs. McAleer, Johnson and McKay arrived in Boston and had a conference with John I. Taylor, the AMERICAN alone gave the public the news that a half interest had been sold and was the first to mention Mr. McAleer's name in connection with the deal.

Last Saturday the AMERICAN also printed the news that an effort would be made to bring John Scott into the management of next year's Red Sox. The papers declined to touch this for a joke. This morning, however, four days later, the same papers were forced to admit that Scott would probably return here; in fact, most of them printed an interview with McAleer in which he stated that the former star first baseman would be in charge of the local team as "field boss."

The AMERICAN to-day is telling its readers the name of the man who will probably succeed Robert McBoy as secretary of the Boston Baseball Club, Harvey T. Woodruff of Chicago.

There is little need to say more. If you, Mr. Reader, want to keep abreast of the news you know what to do. Get the AMERICAN, daily and Sunday. The AMERICAN is not a monthly magazine. It is a NEWSPAPER, THIS NEWSPAPER, in sporting news as well as all others.

120 MEXICANS ARE KILLED IN BATTLE

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 19.—One hundred and twenty men have been killed in a battle between Revolutionists and federals at Gallego, Del Grijalva, in the State of Chiapas. News of the engagement reached here to-day.

HAIL VICTORY ON STEAMER TRIPS

Many Boston people to-day decided to remain a little longer this season at Pemberton Hull and Nantasket. The reason for this because the Nantasket Steamboat Company did an unprecedented thing—It changed its mind.

The company had prepared a new schedule for yesterday which cut off a lot of boats and wound up the historic town of Hull pretty completely. The Sunday AMERICAN, in response to a demand from the outraged public, printed the facts about the arrogant action of this company, together with a statement from Mayor Fitzgerald U. which he declared that the manner in which this monopoly treated the public was outrageous.

When the gentlemen who have been making a fortune out of this company read the Sunday AMERICAN they concluded that the public had some rights and they recalled yesterday's schedule, which had been already printed, and decided to run all of their boats on the regular schedule for some time yet.

The real reason why this company ceased to the front so promptly in face of the public demand was because attention was called to the fact that they charge double when they should for a trip to Nantasket and return. Probably everybody who ever went to Nantasket for this route has made the remark to himself, if not to others, that he was being stung when he was required to pay 50 cents for a round-trip ticket.

Many people who have a right to enjoy the pleasures of Nantasket, one of the best beaches in New England, can't afford to pay this exorbitant charge.

But New England is rather slow to act on some things and the company has been permitted to go along for years and years gathering in this money without any organized protest.

The Tigers are here. Hugh Jennings's husky warriors will begin their last show of the season at Red Sox park this afternoon. The best American League "drawing cards" in Boston will be here for four days and then will go home to remain until the Spring of 1912 comes along with a bunch of pennant-winning Red Sox.

The Tigers and Red Sox have always fought game and thrilling battles at the end. They will probably finish with a rattle that will be heard some ways out on Hyde Park boulevard. The Athletics have not won that pennant yet, and, although it looks almost a certainty for them to capture the hunting, Detroit is fighting gamely with just a matter of hope that Mack's crowd of ball tossers will fall down in the closing struggles.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 19.—The St. Louis Cardinals and the Rustlers are down on the card for another double-header to-day. This is the third these two teams have played within the last three days, Boston-Tenney and Bresnahan are out for to-day's games, as a win will give them the series. Each team has won one game and tied one.

STORROW ONE OF 6 INDICTED AS SHOE TRUST

James J. Storrow, Boston banker and former candidate for Mayor, and five others, prominent in the management of the United Shoe Machinery Company, were to-day indicted by the Federal Grand Jury on the charge of criminal conspiracy in maintaining the United Shoe Machinery Company in restraint of trade.

INDICTMENT AGAINST MEN AS INDIVIDUALS.

The other five men indicted were Sidney W. Winslow, Edward P. Hurd, George W. Brown, William Barbour and Elmer P. Howe.

The indictment was against these men, who are officials of the company, and not against the corporation, so that the organization is not affected by the grand jury's action.

Mr. Storrow is in Europe. Others of the indicted men declined to make any comment. Each was indicted twice on the charge that he had conspired criminally to restrain trade.

It is charged that they have been working through the Shoe Machinery Company, which they have dominated and controlled, in a way to make them as individuals criminally liable under the Sherman act.

No date was set by Judge Dodge, to whom the indictments were reported, for the arraignment of the accused men, but it was said that their attorneys would be notified of the action of the Grand Jury, and that they would be arraigned in court later in the week.

Capital of $50,000,000.

Louis A. Coolidge, treasurer of the United Shoe Machinery Company, said this afternoon:

"The United Shoe Machinery Company has no statement to make on the indictments handed down to-day."

The Boston News Bureau published the following:

"The Federal Grand Jury indictments, being solely against the officials of the United Shoe Machinery Company, the company itself is not affected in the slightest degree.

"The indictments should therefore have no effect on the stock of the company, as the business and earnings are not affected, and a large dividends can be paid in the future as in the past."

The United Shoe Machinery Corporation is incorporated under the laws of New Jersey. The authorized capital stock is $50,000,000. The issued stock is $34,985,775. The officers are: President, S. W. Winslow; vice-presidents, W. F. Robinson, William Barbour of New York, G. W. Brown, E. T. Hurd; treasurer, L. A. Coolidge; assistant treasurer E. P. Brown; secretary, L. H. Baker.

District Attorney's Statement.

District Attorney French issued this statement:

"The United States Circuit Court grand jury, under the supervision of United States Attorney Asa P. French, assisted by William S. Gregg and Oliver E. Pagan, representatives of the Department of Justice from Washington, to-day presented to the court two indictments, each being against Sidney W. Winslow, Edward P. Hurd, George W. Brown, James J. Storrow, William Barbour and Elmer P. Howe, all prominent in the management of the so-called Shoe Machinery Trust centring in Boston.

"In these indictments the District Attorney has varied the charge in different counts to meet possible variations in the evidence at the trial and possible variations in the views of the trial court and higher courts as to the applicability of the different parts of the Sherman law to the facts stated.

"Each indictment charge that the defendants have been working through the instrumentality of the United Shoe Machinery Company, which they have dominated and controlled in a way to make them as individuals criminally liable under the Sherman act.

"The indictments first describe the shoe manufacturing business as the shoe machinery manufacturing business as they existed prior to the Sherman act of 1890, and then set forth all the facts pertaining to the merger on that day of the three shoe-machinery manufacturing corporations then dominated and McKay lasting Machine Company, formerly dominated by defendants Winslow, Hurd and Brown, the McKay Shoe Machinery Company, formerly dominated by defendants Barbour and Howe—under the new name of United Shoe Machinery Company, and the subsequent carrying on of the business under that name. Then is told the story of the oppressive uniform lease-provisions, requiring shoe manufacturers to lease from the United exclusively upon pain of having all their leases canceled and all the United machinery removed from their factories. It is further charged that this process drove other shoe machinery manufacturers out of business and effectually tied up the industry.

Charges In Indictments.

"One indictment, making no mention of patents, charges that this whole transaction was a monopolizing of the trade in shoe machinery, and a conspiracy to monopolize the same. The other indictment charges, in one count, that this carrying of the business under the merger was a keeping in a combination in restraint of trade of the merged companies, insofar as their patent monopolies were extended under the merger; and, in another count, that there was a conspiracy in restraint of the trade of the shoe manufacturers, and, in still another count, that the whole transaction was a monopolization of interstate trade and commerce in shoe machinery, in that the companies permitted to the three companies under their patents were extended far beyond their original bounds. Appropriate allegations are made to show the pernicious effect of all this upon the public.

Government Takes Up the Case.

Complaints made to the Department of Justice against the United Shoe Machinery Company—the so-called "Shoe Machinery Trust"—brought the attention of the government to its case.

It is understood that the corporation was charged with being a monopoly in restraint of trade. Infringement of patent laws was also involved, it is said.

Prompt action followed the presentment following the receipt of the complaints. In April, 1910, Attorney General Wickersham appointed William S. Gregg, special assistant to United States Attorney General Lawrence Maxwell, a government expert, Special Agents Oliver E. Pagan and James Brew assisted Mr. Gregg in his search for evidence.

The result of the work of these government officials was that on July 26 of this year Attorney General Wickersham ordered the United States Attorney for Boston to present evidence to the Federal Grand Jury that recently met in Boston.

The United Shoe Machinery Company came into being in 1899, when a group headed by Sydney Winslow, who had learned shoemaking in a small factory in Salem, formed the trust, which, by secure advantages of combining the three leading companies then making shoe machinery—the Consolidated Boot Machine Company, Consolidated Screw Machine Company and McKay Lasting Machine Company. The company was incorporated, in 1905 and Charles H. Ingersoll companies sprang up in Canada, Germany, Britain, France and Denmark. In the same year the manufacturing of all its machines was concentrated in one large factory at Beverly. The United Shoe Machinery Company now employs 6,000 hands, who turn out 20,000 shoe machines yearly.

Royalty System Workings.

The royalty system, by which the construction dispenses of its machines, allows a shoe manufacturer to lease machinery, paying rentals in royalties on every shoe made.

The manufacturer may buy machinery from the United Shoe Machinery Company providing he buys his "findings," such as wire, nails and eyelets, from the same company.

It is claimed that the royalty charged by the company is about 2.25 cents per pair of shoes.

Last August the company brought suit against Thomas H. Plant, a Boston shoe manufacturer, charging patent infringements. Mr. Plant sold his business to the United Shoe Machinery Company, but the company, after a bitter fight, brought suit against him for incident company—the Brenkman Shoe Machinery Company—for infringements complained of by the United Shoe Machinery Company.

The most important happening in the life of the United Shoe Machinery Company was the unexpected government investigation. The special grand jury was called August 1. Government agents started to work on the case in April, 1910. A number of leases would be a vital question for the grand jury to consider. It was made an extensive investigation, sitting for many days, hearing a number of witnesses.

Announcement of the sitting in the present session of the grand jury was the first proposal for a State investigation in that direction. Governor Foss has called attention to the Legislature, which was then in session, to the matter, but it failed to reach the alleged monopoly. The legislature, however, did not act, as the Federal Government had already started to unravel the situation.

Foss Demands Investigation.

Governor Foss, then turning to Attorney General Swift, demanded an immediate investigation of the monopoly of the Massachusetts shoe machinery industry. The Attorney General replied that he could not, the Governor for evidence. The Governor replied that he had not the power to subpoena witnesses to supply evidence. Meanwhile the A. A. Shoe & Leather Association had taken action, but Governor Foss again urged the legislature to take action. Governor Foss sent a second message with a letter from the president of a large Massachusetts shoe manufacturing company relating conditions in the industry.

If You Won't Let Them Steal from Your Government---They'll Steal From You

That's the Simple Explanation of the Rise in the Price of Sugar.

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

You know that about the lowest, most dishonorable and persistently thievish—even among the big American monopolies—is the Sugar Trust.

You read the revelations in the Sugar Trust trials, the proof that the "distinguished, high-minded, financial captains" in charge of the trust had been stealing systematically from the government that gave them protection.

With false weights, with bribery of government officials, with tricky springs and levers to cheat the scales, the eminently "respectable gentlemen" in charge of the Sugar Trust stole from the government year after year.

These statements are part of the public record. The fact that the "eminently respectable gentlemen" who did the stealing and put the proceeds in their pockets did not go to jail is due to the other fact that in America, when you are rich enough, and when you steal enough, YOU DON'T GO TO JAIL.

While the Sugar Trust was stealing millions a year from the government, sugar was comparatively low in price.

A good price was charged—a good, profitable price. And the profit on that price, plus the amount that the "respectable gentlemen" were stealing systematically from the government, was sufficient temporarily to satisfy the trust management.

Now, however, the stealing from the government has stopped and the Sugar Trust puts up the price of sugar to the highest point on record—to take out of the pockets of you consumers the money that can no longer safely be stolen from the government.

While stealing from the government as well as the people was part of the Sugar Trust program, sugar sold as low as $4.60 a hundred, a little less than five cents a pound.

Now sugar is selling for six and three-quarters and seven cents a pound.

This price is the highest on record, and it surprises some good souls. But it need not surprise them.

The Sugar Trust feels that it is entitled to steal a certain amount from the American people in some way. All of the trusts feel that way. Therefore, when stealing directly from the government is interfered with, the trust raises the price of sugar and steals directly from the consumer.

It would seem that sooner or later some of these "respectable gentlemen" will have to be put in jail. That is to say, if the public has any real objection to being robbed.

"Should I Save My Mother or My Wife First?" Asks a Reader

If You Didn't Save Your Mother First, Your Wife Ought to Leave You as Soon as She Got on Shore

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

Here's an interesting letter from Arthur Tarshis:

Editor AMERICAN:

Will you kindly answer the following question in your editorial column?

I am sure that while this query is one of a very deep character, still I feel that your decision in the matter will suffice.

"If a man is travelling at sea with his wife and his mother, and the boat should capsize, he being able to swim, who should he attempt to save first, the wife or the mother?"

Thanking you in advance for your kindness, I am, very truly yours,

ARTHUR TARSHIS.

P. S.—Please do not answer from a religious standpoint, but from a duty-bound view.

The answer to this is very simple, very plain, from every point of view, religious or other.

A man owes a great deal to his wife, but he owes infinitely more to his mother, and it is a poor man who doesn't realize this.

To the credit of women it can be said that they are very rarely lacking in a sense of duty to their mothers. There is very little doubt at all as to what a woman would do if her husband and her mother fell into the water at the same time, if she could swim and they could not.

The husband would flounder as best he might until the mother was saved—that would be exactly right.

Many men would try to save their wives first in such a case—unless they happened to want a good excuse to get rid of her.

And there are not a few that would save their pocketbooks before they saved either wife or mother—"civilization."

A real man, however, who saw his mother in danger would think of nothing else, not of himself, his wife, or his children, until he had saved his mother.

If a man were so lacking in decency and duty as to put anything before his mother's safety, if he did save the wife and allowed the mother to perish, the best thing for the wife to do would be to leave him as soon as she reached dry land, for he would not be a man worth keeping.

WAY WE ARE WASTING OUR FARM LAND

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

CIVILIZATION has its roots in the soil. Science, as well as Scripture, teaches us that even as individuals, our foundation is in the dust, and that our success largely depends upon the intelligent heed that we give to the physical basis of life.

It may be that we think more of our minds than of our bodies, but even so, we can never get far away from the body, and the respect which we show it will go far toward determining the worth of whatever there is about us that is not body.

Now the soil sustains much the same relation to civilization that body does to mind. It is not its finest feature, but it is its basis.

Collectively, we cannot get away from the soil and from the need of its intelligent cultivation any more than we can get away from the body and from its nurture.

Whatever stress, then, we may lay upon art, science and religion, the fundamental art and science is agriculture. Once let farming become an abandoned profession and everything stop. Or, once let the soil become exhausted, and there would be an end to every other profession.

Our dependence upon dirt may be a humiliating confession, but is it a fact that we have everlastingly to reckon with. The falling off of 15 per cent in the corn crop this year will affect every man and woman in the country.

One Vital Way in Which Conservation May Be Employed

Of course, no amount of scientific skill harnessed into agriculture will suffice to overcome adverse weather conditions. It would not have tempered the heat nor broken the drought of this past Summer, but it would prevent results which, unless avoided, will loom in disaster to our country and to all its interests.

We are hearing a great deal about the conservation of our national resources. The matter has been considered in relation, especially, to forests, mines and water supply.

There is another and probably quite as serious an aspect of the conservation question to which as yet comparatively little thought has been given.

What I refer to is the need of conserving the natural efficiency of the soil by restoring to it those chemical properties which are taken from it by the development of crops.

Everything that grows in the ground extracts from the ground something that goes to make growth. Every crop leaves the soil poorer in the Autumn than it was in the Spring. No matter how rich a man may be, he is steadily moving in the direction of poverty if he constantly takes from his pocket without as constantly replenishing it, and if he goes on in that way and lives long enough he will die a pauper.

Four Million Acres Said to Be Pauperized Already

It is said that 4,000,000 acres of our land have already been pauperized in that way; that is to say, by the draining from the soil of those ingredients—sulphur, nitrogen and potash in particular—which are the prime essentials to vegetable growth, and all the rest of our acres are gradually deteriorating in the same way.

It is not difficult to see what this will eventuate in, if corrective means are not employed, and if agriculture is not made to consist in replenishing the ground with productive elements, as well as in using the ground in the creation of crops.

So long as we had a limitless margin of uncultivated land—what is called virgin soil—or so long as we had only a limited population dependent upon the output from the soil, the gradual reduction in crop-producing ingredients would seem to be of little practical significance, but that margin is now being rapidly reduced while population is being, with corresponding rapidity, increased.

Consequently, as soil deteriorates, by the exhaustion of its virtues, the balance between home production and home consumption is bound to be a diminishing one.

What the issue, under a continuation of such conditions, is certain to be, it requires no large amount of intelligence to forecast.

Farmers have been handling their ground as though it could be used without becoming worn out, or as though there were still an indefinite extent of territory upon which to set the when present lands had become impoverished. They have been treating timber and water supply with an eye only to the immediate present, and with no regard to the results inevitably consequent upon the indefinite continuance of such a policy.

Abundance Has Made Us Criminally Wasteful.

We have been manic criminally wasteful by the prodigal abundance of the resources that were at our command. We have been made spendthrifts just as any heir is liable to become extravagant upon entering upon an inheritance which he has himself had no share in producing.

A very determined effort is being made in one of the States of the Southwest to reverse the present agricultural tendencies. In a succeeding article, to speak of the experiments that are there being conducted.

Revinge, sed Pa, bent there anything I can say that will git you mind off of clothes? If I say anything about meeting Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, or something about a new style of hat called the Philadelphia Fluff, or I say anything about facing you say something about a new dress called the Racing Hive.

Well, sed Ma, stop beefing & tell me what you know about Mister Carlile.

He was a great old guy, sed Pa. He was a sinnick. He dident like women, for one thing, sed Pa. You dont tell me, sed Ma. I do tell you, sed Pa. He was a sinnick & he dident like the womens.

Goodness, sed Ma, I'll bet he was a tall, slender young man with a face & figger like Apollo. I'll bet he had to hide in his hotel at nite because the whumen chased after him so much.

You & Carlile, sed Ma, you two deespisers of whumen, you are certingly two Handsome Hanks, sed Ma. No wonder you deespise whumen, sed ma.

I wud like to have been a woman in the days that Mister Carlile lived, sed Ma. I wud like to have got into a stage coach & looked at his sour old whiskered face & stepped on his feet so he wud git mad & grab me by the seet. Shmick! sed Ma. I'll bet he was the kind of a shmick that wud go hoam at nite & beat his wife. That is a quaint old custom that obtains in the country where he lived, Ma sed, but it has sort of died out over here, since whumen jerned their rights, & there isfits.

He wasent as bad as all that, sed Pa. He was purely a old dunderhead, Pa sed. Here is sum of his filosofy. If I had a dog that was scrappy & smart I wud know that his sum pere sets in carmachin he was a lody. If that scrappy and smart dog came a fawning around me & made me think I was a grate guy, I wud know that in sum previous incarnashun it had been married to me.

Filosofers in general, sed Pa, have little use for the gurls, bless them.

Bless who, sed Ma, gitting over close to Pa, bless who the gurls or the filosofers?

Bless the gurls, sed Pa, moving away a little.

Art for Art's Sake

By MILES OVERHOLT

A Story with Three Rattles and a Button.

CHAPTER ONE.

'TWAS midnight. Not a sound was heard from Hoosier street to Temple Place. The moon shone on in peaceful calm, on man and beast a soothing balm. The biggest bank with vaults of steel was tightly closed against appeal. Four, ragged men without a sou, walked past that bank and cussed it blue.

But sark! Along the darkened street, darting along with noiseless feet, three men who look like Jesse James, who every morning change their names, with guns and pistols, masks and knives, ready to take a dozen lives, enter the door from the alleyway, while the watchman hums a tuneful lay.

CHAPTER TWO.

Dashing along on a jaded steed, a robber rides at break-neck speed, while close behind and riding hard is another one, besides his pard. A shot rings out; another; then a fusillade rings down the glen, while into view come Sheriff Joe and Johnny Doe and Richard Roe.

The three brave sleuths ride hard and fast, and, pressing closer then at last they aim their guns and shoot and shout, but the robbers know what they're about, and as they ride for a precipice clamber and line it cross by this 'n and down a hidden trail they ride, feeling not what may betide.

CHAPTER THREE.

The brave sleuths urge their foaming steeds, with thoughts of many brave deeds, and down the canyon's wall they climb reaching the bottom just in time to see the bandits safely ride to a stonewall fort where they might hide.

They all dismount and bullets fly each man makes up his mind to die. So the war is waged till the robbers fall; each one is struck by a leaden ball, and he turns his toes to the selling sun; his reckless life on earth is done.

THE BUTTON.

Now the story's told, save a line or two, to explain the tale so it's clear to you. You see the bank with vaults of steel to which no man could make appeal, and the robbers hold and the watchman, too, and the cash on hand that was oversize, and the fighting men with Sheriff Joe were working for a picture actor!

MORGAN'S CASH FOR GERMANY

PARIS, Sept. 19.—Financial Morgan, according to a report here that is believed to be reliable, has come to the financial relief of Germany and has agreed to lend that country enough money to avert the further panic, if necessary, unless in an event France's protest regarding Morocco. It is reported that Mr. Morgan will start for Berlin tonight or in the first hour of the forenoon.

The Berlin correspondent of the French newspapers declares not that an agreement has been reached between Germany and France on all points involved, but that the progress seems to promise a settlement of the Moroccan difficulty.

These matters, he understood, gave wicked Count Isvar Metternich, the new German ambassador to France, a chance for effective work in the interests of peace, for a good deal of the time he has been in office many days were spent by the envoys.

For this reason, it was soon agreed that the Morocco proposition would finally be settled between the two countries and Germany could retire from the scene. Then, it was understood, the two countries would take up the question of the Congo and other matters.

Germany has agreed to buy Mogador, Southern Morocco's treasury ports. Hinterland, or the territory behind the ports, comes under the same deal. The settlement, it is said, will be made next fall, and the recent apparently rumored withdrawal of German troops from Agadir. The banking interests of France, England and Russia are reported to be behind Morgan, apparently in the whole of financial as a political movement.

France sends millions in German notes, special dispatches to the Paris papers today and the absolute necessity of having money on hand to meet these responsible obligations has caused the intervention of Morgan.

French bankers say that the Rothschilds have refused either the British or the Berlin financial combine, and that the Rothschild head of the republic himself, Joseph Caillaux, has been unfriendly and refused to extend a large loan. It is believed that Morgan has succeeded where Rothschild failed. It is said that he could not undertake the negotiations without the consent of the President, Taft, of New York, Rockefeller.

Then the Baron journeyed to Paris and conferred with the French premier and all of the leading bankers of London and Paris, and the result was that they decided to loan a sum to the German Government sufficient to meet the obligations that seem to be necessary to prevent a widespread panic.

What interest the syndicate was going to charge Germany for the loan could not be ascertained, but it was understood that the bankers from the latter agreed to accept the security offered by the German government, provided the terms were satisfactory and the rate of interest was not too high.

The German bankers in their conference could not be induced to accept the loan at once when it was pointed out to him that urgent necessity for the loan made it quite impossible for Germany's credit to rise, although it was said that the rate of interest would be reluctantly yielded.

Tunnel Bargain Basement

This Woman Had Our Values Proved to Her Very Definitely----

SHE had in mind a coat elsewhere at 25.00. Before buying it she came to the Tunnel Bargain Basement and finding a coat here that she liked bought it instead. Later she told us that the coat she bought here (the price of which was 14.75) was almost identical to the one at 25.00 she had had in mind.

We said 25.00 values at 14.75—she found out for herself that the coat was just the same value as the lot at 25.00. WHY? Ours was a sample—hence at less than regular.

MR. TEELING AT HOME IS HIGHLY TICKLED

Lieutenant Richard S. Teeling says to say that the complimentary banquet, given in his friends to celebrate his visit to Europe, was one of the happiest occasions of his life. Mr. Teeling accompanied Mayor Fitzgerald and Commissioner Hall through Europe, and did not return until after the others of the party. The banquet to him took place at Frost & Hooper's, with District Attorney Pelletier as toastmaster. The speakers included Congressman Murray Crane, Mayor Fitzgerald, Edward S. Moore, Assistant District Attorney Joseph A. Conry, Postmaster Frederick O. Tetler, Dr. Timothy J. Shanahan and Jeremiah E. Mahoney. Mr. Teeling gave an interesting account of his trip. Forty-two of Mr. Teeling were present.

CHIN GUEY TO VOTE AT THE PRIMARIES

Chin Guey, a local Chinese merchant, will cast his first ballot, in Ward 21, at the primaries next Monday. Chin, who is a native, of Chinese parents, Chin Guey is the third American-born Chinaman to be given the privileges of the ballot. Chin Guey came to Boston in 1880, when he was fifteen years old. He went to work in the local Chinese trade until he is now one of its leading personalities. In 1906 he visited China and there married Gee Young, who bore a daughter, Fon Toy. Chin Guey is going to be a straight Democrat, a staunch supporter of Governor Foss, he says.

This Has Been Well Named
"The Metal Bed Age"

On account of its strength, durability and cleanliness, metal has rapidly replaced wood for almost every purpose. Where are these qualities more desirable than in bed steads?

This square post, Roman Gold Satin Finished pattern is the acme of the bed maker's art. The Upright Fitting is also square and all edges are rounded. The design cannot be improved upon and you run no risk in buying it. But here is the most interesting part of our story—The price is $25. Examine beds selling for $35 to $40, and then see this one.

There are 35 distinct patterns of brass beds on our Fourth Floor, each one selected on account of some especial merit.

HEARST LETTER STIRS BRITAIN

LONDON, Sept. 19.—William Randolph Hearst's letter to the London Budget replying to the critics who accused him of trying to influence public opinion in Canada in favor of reciprocity has revived a controversy which but a few months ago was so strongly waged on the floor of the House of the Commons and by the press throughout Britain.

The newspapers have taken it up and it is the one subject of discussion where ever politicians forgather.

The Tories, as may be expected, denounce it as they are denounced from the beginning everything that savors of free trade relations between Canada and the United States.

The Liberals who almost to a man favor everything that tends to bringing English speaking peoples closer together, strongly approve the letter.

Interview in Standard.

The Evening Standard prints the following interview:

William Randolph Hearst, proprietor of the New York American and Associated journals throughout the country, who has just arrived in London on his return to the United States after a visit to various parts of Europe. In view of the criticisms which have been directed against his action in relation to Canadian elections and the discussion of the reciprocity question, he has been asked naturally some characteristic expression on the subject.

"It has been alleged," began Mr. Hearst, "that the Boston AMERICAN was interfered with the Canadian elections. All that paper has done is to give the news and articles on the subject of reciprocity and that is a question that affects the United States quite as much as it does Canada. But I consider the legacy of annexation an utterly false issue raised by those distract attention from the real issue. I think this false issue is raised because it does not seem to be one of annexation to reciprocity trade relations between the United States and Canada.

"It would advantage the United States to a certain extent, of course, but it would advantage Canada quite as much, and would not that of citing in figures, about ten years ago, which the United States opens to Canada is now about ten times as great as the trade that Canada opens to the United States.

"The advantage of such a kind of trade relation is measured by the relative importance of the interests involved. The same sentiment of opposition to reciprocity in England—only subjected by any means—and I think it is mainly among those who have not analyzed the matter and have considered it for what it really is.

"I do not think if the open markets of the United States were offered to England that England would accept them, and it seems singular that Englishmen should imagine that Canada would accept them, especially as Canada is a part of the British Empire. Canada's trade is as much essential to the advantage of a part of the Empire nearest to the United States as to whole Empire.

Is a Step Forward.

"There has been so much talk in the United States and Canada about the necessity of a better understanding and closer relation between English speaking nations that I cannot help thinking that reciprocity between the various English speaking countries, Canada, Australia and the United States, would be a step forward in that direction. Consequently some other means ought to be come at to overcome the difficulties which exist between these. This reciprocity treaty seems to me a step in the right direction, and a step and more friendly understanding and I think that the people ought to support it for that reason. You cannot have that association and friendly understanding between nations if the feeling is always to be objected to by one or the other, and that is the case of the idea.

"All the citizens of the United States are not in favor of reciprocity, but I think those who are opposed to it are mistaken in their opposition. So far as annexation is concerned, I cannot conceive that there is the slightest probability of it, consequently I have never seen any reason for opposing it. A good deal has been said in the Canadian newspapers about my opposition, but I have in one of my newspapers of the possibility of annexation. I have said that the United States, and some newspapers have rather hastily and unjustly construed that into what was my personal view.

"I have simply stated that kind me to be justified on the part of the laymen who are directing the policy of the United States, and some newspapers have rather hastily and unjustly construed that into what was my personal view.

"As a matter of fact I did not so, but I have always been in favor of reciprocity between the United States and Canada under a treaty that would be mutually beneficial, because a reciprocity treaty seems to include nearly all the advantages she would secure under a political union with the United States.

"It gives to her full trading opportunities while if she were denied access to the markets of the United States she would be right at her door, political union might be contemplated to obtain them.

"I do not see that political unions are necessary. I do not see that anything is contemplated or desired among English speaking nations except a certain harmony of action for mutual advantage, and that, I think, ought to be encouraged. Speaking to my mind, proposition advocated so often in England that I cannot imagine that the advocates are the majority of farsighted Englishmen are not in favor of that co-operation. I consider reciprocity a step in that direction, and I think that is the first really important step that has been taken.

Discusses Annexation.

"So far as the article in question is concerned, not only did I not write it, but all I have seen are references to it.

"Sometimes a writer in one of my publications differs somewhat in perfect good faith which is entirely contrary to my personal view. I am not on the in correct that at the earliest opportunity, and I have done so in my summaries for the weekly budget which expressed my views. I have said finally that as far as the question of annexation is concerned I believe there is less likelihood of a political union between the United States and Canada under a reciprocity treaty than without such a treaty, because a reciprocity treaty answers to Canada nearly all the advantages she would secure under a political union with the United States.

"It gives to her full trading opportunities while if she were denied access to the markets of the United States she would be right at her door, political union might be contemplated to obtain them.

"I do not see that political unions are necessary. I do not see that anything is contemplated or desired among English speaking nations except a certain harmony of action for mutual advantage, and that, I think, ought to be encouraged. Speaking to my mind, proposition advocated so often in England that I cannot imagine that the advocates are the majority of farsighted Englishmen are not in favor of that co-operation. I consider reciprocity a step in that direction, and I think that is the first really important step that has been taken.

WIDOW HEARD AT DEATH TRIAL

How she struggled with a man who held a loaded revolver in his hand, in an effort to save her husband's life, was dramatically told to the jury of seven men and five women in Suffolk Superior Criminal court by Mrs. Margaret Curry, twenty-one years old.

Mrs. Curry was the star witness for the prosecution in the trial of Melvin Melvin, a former corporal of marines at the Charlestown Navy Yard, charged with the murder of John J. Curry on the night of December 10, 1910, at No. 29 Wapping street, Charlestown.

After struggle with Melvin was fruitless, she said, for although her husband managed to get outside the room, one of the two shots which was fired at him as he was fleeing went through the panel of the door and struck him in the back. He died two days later at the Relief hospital.

"When I saw Melvin pull the revolver from his pocket and point it toward my husband I struck his arm and the first shot went into the ceiling," she testified.

"I told my husband to run, and he managed to get out of Melvin's room. He slammed the door behind him. I still struggled with Melvin. I had hold of him by the back. While I was still holding him he fired another shot, which went through the panel of the door. Then he fired the third shot, which went into the plastering at the side of the door. I was still holding the man. The fourth and fifth shots were fired in the hallway outside the door. While I was still struggling with Melvin trying to prevent him from firing the third, fourth and fifth shots my husband was on the stairway struggling with Melvin.

In addition Mrs. Curry testified in regard to the shot that Melvin fired at the expert shot, having won several medals as a marksman while in the Navy.

Patrolmen John Ross and John T. Brady, of the Charlestown police station testified that they arrested Melvin in his room after a struggle, on the way to the station Melvin said that he had shot Carey because the latter had refused to do him a favor, according to Ross' testimony.

PLANS IDEAL HOME FOR WORKING GIRLS

Miss Foster Plans to Free Them from Monotony of the Hall Room.

By REV. ALBERT E. GEORGE.

Girls, do you live alone in this city in a small hall bedroom, without any conveniences to do a little washing or ironing for yourselves, to save expenses?

Would it not be pleasant for you, when you come back from your daily work to have the privilege of using a sewing machine, or a dress form, or a typewriter, or a camera for the sake of a little diversion, or to play a piano or a mandolin?

A Boston working girl, Miss Marion L. Foster has had such a place in view for working girls for some time. She came to this city many years ago, and lived for some time in hall bedrooms. In this narrow place, she had no conveniences. Her wages were small. If she only had a place where she could wash a few things every week for herself and then iron them, she could make both ends meet. All the time she had to worry—how to pay this or that little debt and to economize in her food.

Planned for the Future.

For several years, she lived in closed quarters, unable to do much to help other working girls, who were pinched as she was.

But Miss Foster planned for the future.

MISS MARION LOUISE FOSTER

Miss Marion Louise Foster, who knows the bitterness of the hall bedroom by experience and who plans an ideal home for working girls in Boston.

She saved every cent she could. Her project was this. She wanted to get a house, where the working girls would have the privileges of home life; where they could do about as they pleased, and get many advantages at no extra expense above that of the hall bed room.

Eventually she will have an ideal home for working girls in this city. At present she has hired a suite of rooms in Northampton street. This has come about gradually and will lead in the long run to the establishment of a home which she thinks will meet the needs of so many young women in a large city.

"This suite that I have hired," she said today, "has been a gradual step. When I first started to help the homeless girl in this city, all this looked far too big for me. Now I am able to give a good home to the working girls at a moderate rate. I go to work myself daily, and I am one with the girls. Here is the kitchen, and every one of the girls can come out here and make her own breakfast or dinner as the case may be. For dinner, we five girls living in this suite club together and get a good meal, and it is so much better than to be living at the restaurant.

Privileges of Laundry.

"Then you know that when a girl comes home from work she wants a place to wash out a few pieces. So every girl has this privilege here. I have set tubs and offer, when I come home from my work, I will find two girls washing and ironing shirt waists. One girl will do the ironing and the other girl will do the washing. The girls are constantly making bargains with one another, what to do and how to serve one another.

"I remember when I first came to this city and asked for the privilege of washing a few things for myself, I had to go down to the cellar to a dingy lighted place, where it was damp and unhealthy, and then when I wanted to iron I had to do this on the top of my bureau drawer after emptying its contents on the bed, and the iron, which had to be heated over a kerosene stove.

"After we get through our work we go into the sitting room and some one plays the symphony organ. We are all working girls and we know how to sympathize with one another in our loneliness.

"When a girl is making a dress for herself we all give her some help. There is the dress form, which we all use. We trim all our own hats. We discuss cheap but wholesome dishes. We tell one another what took place during the day and we have such a good time.

"Why, when I think what I suffered in a small bedroom in a house for three years in this city, how I had to strive myself in order to make both ends meet and what little pleasures I had, I can now see what this plan of mine means to the homeless girl of this city.

Paying for the Furniture.

"This furniture that you see in these rooms has been paid for gradually, and I tell you it was a struggle.

"I used to be so discouraged, and blue, when I lived in a small room. It was on one of these blue days that I thought of the plan, which I am now carrying out.

"I am going some day to have a working girls' home along new points. I want it to be home-like. I do not want a large home, but a small one of sixteen rooms and then, when I feel the work should be enlarged, I can add another house to it, but one large house with a hundred girls in it is not my plan. I want to follow the cottage system. Get a number of these houses together, and have no red tape rules.

"It makes my heart ache to know of the many girls in this city who are living on a small salary and trying to do so much with it.

Get-Trimmed-Quick

It isn't a case of get-rich-quick for the Factor Opticals, in spite of his high prices, the get-trimmed quick soon find they have paid $2 or $3 more than Wilson Bros. charge for glasses and they never go back. More than that, they can't get the same high grade lenses, the same careful advice there is to get fast, and always at Wilson Bros., the Scollay sq. jewellers, who employ 3 skilled opticians; a safe place to have your eyes tested and your watch repaired. Prescription not necessary; bring in your broken lens. 10 minute watchmaker, open evenings.

ALL YOU NEED IS A CASCARET TONIGHT

No Sick Headache, Bilious Stomach, Coated Tongue or Constipated Bowels by Morning.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, the biliousness, the indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out tonight and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse and regulate your stomach; remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and that misery-making gas; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out of the system all the decomposed waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Children love to take Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.

TAFT URGED TO BAR GABY DESLYS

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—That President William H. Taft was appealed to, in his official capacity, to prevent the admission into this country of Gaby Deslys, the French dancer, as an "undesirable" became known today.

President Taft was appealed to by Mrs. George T. Vickers, president of the New Jersey Equal Franchise League, who made a determined fight against the entry of Mlle. Deslys.

Mrs. Vickers carried her protest up to President Taft, whom she knows personally, and although her efforts failed, she has started a campaign for an amendment of the immigration laws regarding undesirables.

Mrs. Vickers first wrote to Acting Commissioner of Immigration Uhl. She cited the cases of poor immigrant girls who were refused admission.

"Surely," she said, "if honest people whose only misfortune is temporary poverty are denied admission, there ought to be some law to exclude those whose only luggage physical and moral, seems to be notoriety and an inordinate desire to coin it into American dollars."

In the meantime Mlle. Deslys is astonishing Fifth avenue by having flowers in place of buttons on her black satin coat, and by wearing a third of a million dollar's worth of pearls on the street.

She confided to a reporter today that she, of all the women in the world, possessed the true secret of how to effortlessly fall in love.

"But I cannot tell set to you," she whispered. "Only can I tell it to a woman."

"Your American women do not fall in love. They do not know how and what is more they have nothing to fall in love with. Dollars, yes, they have dollars to fall in love with, but the men here——

"Oh, such men. They dress so badly. They dress even worse than the Englishmen.

"That is why your women are so unhappy. They have nothing to fall in love with. But I'll tell them how to fall in love before I go away."

TWINS' 73D BIRTHDAY.

NEWBURYPORT, Sept. 19.—Mrs. Sarah Caroline, wife of ex-Alderman Charles W. Page of No. 12 Horton street, and George B. Knight of No. 32 Mills street, twin children of Thomas and Sally B. Knight, celebrated the seventy-third anniversary of their birth. They received numerous congratulations from callers.

PARENTS CLAIM FUND FOR TWINS

By arriving at the age of three months James and Edmund, twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. James Love of Marlborough have qualified for membership in the James H. Gregory Twin Fund. James H. Gregory, who died two years ago, left $1,000, the income to be paid to the mother of the first twins born in town, providing the twins live to be three months. The Love twins are the second set born since the bequest, but the first to live through the three months' period.

The twins, born June 17, are called the "Bunker Hill Boys." They have been in the best of health from the first. The father will at once apply to the Selectmen for the income, as the town fathers have been serving as trustees of the fund.

SEEK AUTOIST WHO FLED VICTIM

Policemen from all the Boston stations are trying to locate the driver of an auto who carried Frederick N. Rock, president of the Crafts Iron Works of Roxbury, to the City Hospital and left him on the sidewalk outside, after he had knocked him down at the corner of Massachusetts avenue and Magazine street, Roxbury. Leaving Rock unconscious, the man jumped into his machine and sped away.

Orderly Cummings, who was on duty at the lodge office of the hospital, heard the car stop and then tear away at lessened speed. He looked out and saw a man lifting on the sidewalk. He rang for help and went out and carried Rock to the accident ward.

Attacked in North street, less than a minute's throw from the spot where Lieutenant William A. Whittier of the U. S. Revenue Cutter Androscoggin received the injuries which later caused his death, Antonio Sansevich, fruiterer, of No. 1 Knollback street, Malden, is dying at the Relief Hospital from a fractured skull.

Sansevich was found unconscious in the gutter. His name is on the dangerous list and the physicians say his complete recovery is all but impossible. Sansevich was badly beaten by his assailant and left to die in the street. His assailant escaped and the police are searching for him.

Sansevich has been unconscious since he arrived at the hospital and neither the physicians here nor the police believe that he will be able to furnish any information from him regarding the

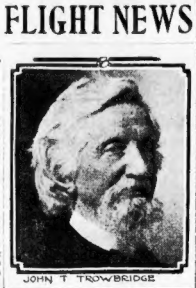
AUTHOR OF "DARIUS GREEN" IS KEEN ON HEARST FLIGHT NEWS

John T. Trowbridge, at Eighty-four, Follows Progress of Aviators Across Continent.



JOHN T. TROWBRIDGE

John T. Trowbridge, author of "Darius Green and His Flying Machine," at the age of eighty-four is interested in the flights being made for the William Randolph Hearst aviation prize of $50,000 for the first man to fly across the American continent.

Keen in mind and strong of body, Mr. Trowbridge sees in the near future a transcontinental aeroplane flight a reality.

"Oh, they'll fly across the continent," he exclaimed when asked his opinion of the possibility of men in heavier-than-air machines making the trip. But he recognizes the weakness of this type of flying machine and thinks still what aviators need is something to keep them up when their power gives out.

He celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday yesterday at his home in Arlington, which from Pleasant street commands the northern part of Spy Pond. During the day many callers dropped in with congratulations and gifts and to receive his warm handclasp and the kindly glance of his bright blue eyes.

Not Up in Air Yet.

Darius Green, the farmer's son, who made him some wings and leaped into the air only to come to earth with a crash, would not have got so much space in literary history if Mr. Trowbridge had followed his original plan. It was to write a few lines on such an incident, related to him by a friend, which struck his fancy as a bit subject to be treated in humorous verse. But he got so interested in the Yankee that he built his model into the poem that has been known to the English speaking world for over forty years.

Last year at Squantum the aviators gave the author of Darius a big reception. He had many invitations to ride.

"I told my family that I was going to ride over the house and drop a doughnut down on them," he said with a smile. "When I got back I told them that the reason I hadn't was that there were no doughnuts to be had at the aviation field.

"Down there they all tried to make me confess that I dreamed of seeing such feats as were performed there, crafting me as if I were the first man to invent the aeroplane, but I had no idea whatever when I wrote the poem that I was to see the dreams of Darius realized. Now when I see a man flying through the air at the rate of sixty miles an hour, I am amazed."

Prolific as Writer.

Mr. Trowbridge is the author of over fifty books, some of the more famous being "Neighbor Jackwood," "Cudjo's Cave" and "Coupon Bonds." His poems fill a large octavo volume. "Yes, and I'm still alive," he said with a laugh. "And, strange to say, many of my readers are, too.

As a witty story-teller he is a favorite with literary clubs. Only yesterday he declined an invitation of the Puddingstone Club to read "Darius Green," which he used to recite from memory.

"I'm through with reading it," he said modestly.

He is fond of travel.

"I have crossed the Atlantic eight times," said he, "but I don't expect to go to Europe this year on account of the cholera."

Although an octogenarian, he has made no trip alone in his good health thinking nothing of the inconveniences that would bother many younger men. Several Winters he has spent at Orange Park, Fla., where Nixon Waterman, a cenfederal friend, and other authors and artists have a Winter colony, and it is not impossible that Mr. Trowbridge will go down there later in the Fall.

LABOR ACCUSES STATE SENATORS

HAVERHILL, Sept. 19.—Four State Senators were accused by the State Branch of the American Federation of Labor today of having tried covertly to defeat the workingmen's compensation act. The State Senate was denounced from the floor as being "rotten to the core." The Senators accused of duplicity are: Murray, Doyle, Powers and Curley.

Those were two of the serious accusations made in a fiery debate of a proposition to change the method of organized labor's battle for labor legislation on Beacon Hill.

The State Branch of the Federation is to annual convention with 200 delegates present. Dennis D. Driscoll, secretary treasurer, made the motion that opened the door for the discussion of conditions on Beacon Hill. He offered a constitutional amendment to substitute for the present legislative committee of five the executive committee of the State organization, which consists of the president, the vice-president, the secretary-treasurer and five vice-presidents.

Score Beacon Hill.

This was referred to a committee, which reported as a substitute that the constitution ought to be so revised that he legislative committee be reduced to three members. The Boston delegates then offered as a substitute for the report that what ever else the general committee be named there be a legislative committee in each of the local branches, so that the emergency Beacon Hill could be "swamped" with an army of representatives of organized labor.

Then it was that the Legislative Committee of the Senators Murray, Doyle, Powers and Curley had tried to defeat the workingmen's compensation act before it came to a vote, by introducing amendments sent by other persons directly it in committees and elsewhere. When the bill finally passed, only these senators, the four Senators recorded themselves in favor.

In the discussion that followed, William Scoppa of Lowell, a member of the State Federation's Legislative Committee declared:

"The Massachusetts Senate is rotten to the core and conditions on Beacon Hill will never be better until the people have a thorough cleaning out of that chamber."

Hits at Money Power.

"Organized labor has not only demanded but got hundreds of bills passed last year in favor of special privileges. Organized labor, on the other hand, could secure only six bills, and they are held up with those paltry results it was the best year on Beacon Hill ever experienced by organized labor in the history of the Commonwealth."

E. George Bruce of Brockton, also spoke in favor of a large legislative committee, made the charge:

"It has been persistently rumored on Beacon Hill that the great brewing interests invegled our labor men into neglecting some important labor bills, because they their time working for the repeal of the bar and bottle law.

"I don't believe that these charges are well founded, but God knows how we got any results at all last year with the personal difficulties existing between members of our labor interests, while the financial and manufacturing interests of the State were lined up solidly against us.

Urges United Efforts.

"Labor has got to go into politics. Only by the great uprising of the people the State last year was it possible to get these six measures through.

"It is useless for organized labor to delegate election some Governor or some Senator to do work in the Legislature. Senator Lodge would not allow to go unpunished men who influenced such action.

A constitutional amendment to increase the number of vice-presidents from five to seven was unfavorably

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 19.—The Sovereign Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows today selected Winnipeg, Man., as the place for the holding of the next meeting.

LINER IN WITH COLLEGE MEN

The Leyland liner Winifredian arrived from Liverpool to-day with a big delegation of Boston educationalists aboard after two mishaps to her steering gear on the voyage. The gear broke down in the Irish Sea and again yesterday while off this coast in a howling northeast gale.

Among the passengers were Professor Lionel Marks of the Harvard School of Engineering; Professor W. F. Allen and Professor C. M. Spofford of Tech, Professor W. H. Reed of Tufts.

MARTIAL LAW RULES VIENNA

VIENNA, Sept. 19.—For the first time in sixty-two years martial law was proclaimed here this afternoon following an unexpected outbreak of bread rioting.

The city had apparently resumed its tranquility and many of the artillery had been removed from the plazas. Many soldiers had been sent to their barracks when disorder unexpectedly broke out. Men and women with banners paraded the streets singing revolutionary hymns and calling for cheaper food. The mobs threatened demonstrations before a number of shops.

DIET-WALKERS LEAVE CHICAGO

Jesse and Warren Bullum of Boston, who are testing the relative virtues of a meat and a vegetable diet on a walk from Boston to California, resumed their journey to-day from Chicago, after passing the night on the roof of a nineteen-story hotel.

The brothers are making this dietetic experiment for Dr. Dudley A. Sargent of Harvard. By the rules of the trip, Jesse holds to meat diet on route, while Warren remains a vegetarian. Each takes turns in pushing a wheelbarrow containing their luggage.

PERMIT SMITH TO LEAVE NAVY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The resignation from the navy of Lieutenant Roy C. Smith has been accepted by Acting Secretary of the Navy, Henry Adolph Reichmond Nicholson, to take effect upon Lieutenant Smith arrives at his home in Niles, Michigan. Lieutenant Smith's resignation is said to have been given at the request of Rear Admiral Murdock, commanding the Asiatic fleet, after a court of inquiry had investigated charges of unbecoming conduct made against him.

OPERA A LA POULETTE AT MAJESTIC

"Bohemian Girl" Presented with Chickens and Horses on the Side.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Opera in Boston took an early start last evening when it launched the regular season for the Majestic Theatre. Greedy for good music, a full-sized audience of opera devotees gathered "The Bohemian Girl" to its heart and gave every indication that the big production of the Aborn Opera Company hit the mark squarely in the centre.

It was an evening full of enthusiasm and the excitement was not confined on the friendly side of the curtain. An inclination to sing seized everybody in the company and the familiar melodies of "The Bohemian Girl" were generously respected as the slightest sign of approval. The Aborns have stretched every point to make this production phenomenal and the generosity ran into brilliant effects. Not even "The Round Up" has anything on the fine display of horses that made the first act almost a nervous strain and the animals skirmished the stage pathway leading to the mountains. Mounted tenors are great for an audience, but it looked like real work.

Barn Yard In Second Act.

The second act had its extravagance in a wealth of live fowl and other barn yard pets that persisted in getting away from the chorus, much to everybody's delight. The stage gypsies had had successfully raided nearby farm yards and liked choicest poultry when a large goose and a checkered hen flattered straight across the footlights and dropped on the toes of drummer in the orchestra pit. There was charm to his particular brand of music that no ever before suggested quakers.

Musically "The Bohemian Girl" was a success—sensibly so and strikingly so. The limitations of the stage may have added burdens to the company, but they were not visible to the naked eye. There had been no skimping in the making of this production. While the delicious melodies of the opera were received with full approval and the work of the company agreeable in every detail, the greatest enthusiasm from the audience followed the Talent Which winds, a troupe of Arabs who turned the public square of Prussburg into an acrobatic carnival. Vaudeville at its best is nothing like life in Prussburg when the Talent boys and girls burst into an opera.

The effort of the Aborns to spread wealth all over "The Bohemian Girl" did not fail, and it is safe to predict prosperous two weeks for the Majestic. The cast was not neglected in the building of this entertainment.

Has an Excellent Cast.

Although the operatic stage has produced better acting singers, there was no complaint in regard to the purely vocal results. Vera Allen, a charming young woman who seemed to fit snugly into her gypsy surroundings of the early scenes, had a particularly sweet voice, and Thornton D. Urquhart never slipped as he tenored his way through romantic, heroic songs.

Herbert Waterous, who handled "Hearts Bowed Down" pleasantly, was sound in both limb and throat. Joseph Florian was a murderous looking gypsy and Percy Hunter proved his innocence, and Jane Herbert was queenly enough in both manner and voice to be fairly mistaken for Queen of Hungary. Thurston and Ada at the Globe Theatre for the next two weeks.

Castle Square.

If you have wearied of problem plays, if comedy no longer amuses, and if the charms of the gay nineties have palled—if you would list to tales of love and chivalry, if you would see romance, old-fashioned, simple, but intense, then go to see "Beverly of Graustark" at the Castle Square Theatre.

The play is founded on the novel of the same name by Harr McClintock, and is the sequel to another novel, "Graustark." Both books belong to the soul-stirring type introduced by Anthony Hope's "Prisoner of Zenda."

In "Beverly of Graustark" the characters fit well into their unusual setting. The part of the beautiful, dashing American girl, about whom volumes have been and many more will be written, is most charmingly rendered by Mary Young. The hero-prince is called Prince Dantan, and is charmingly created by Morgan Wallace. Mr. Wallace shows a versatility that combines virility with chivalry and grace.

Anthony Kemp, the valet of Graustark, at the opening of the play, is well pinned by Miss Gertrude Bondy, while Mr. Middlemass as Lieutenant Quinnox is forceful and manly. Edmond Bouvet deserves credit for her impersonation of an old negro mammy, and A. L. Mickey as Count Di Cestro does all that could be desired.

Grand Opera House.

A revival of "Ten Nights in a Barroom" pleased a large audience at the opening performance at the Grand Opera House last night, and it was evident that the drama still had lost none of its popularity. The play was well staged, and the cast was capable. Miss Elsa Ryan as Mary Morgan, the drunkard, and he did exception-ally good work. She showed ability in the lovely scenes and was not lacking when called upon for the tragic. Lew Benedict filled the role of Mary Morgan, daughter of the drunkard, and did full justice to it. Pipes, who made a great hit in singing "Dear Father, Come Home," Elma Cornell as the sorrowful as Mrs. Morgan, and her work was very pleasing.

Many in the audience had seen the play before, some more than once, but it was evident that they still enjoyed it. Certainly the play lacks the morbid element, and is wholesome in every respect. Switchel sang several funny songs, and his antics caused much laughter.

National Theatre.

Turning away by the hundreds people who clamored for admittance, the National Theatre, Boston's newest playhouse, opened its doors last night to an audience which filled every seat in the capacious auditorium.

The National-Boston Consolidated Modern Minstrels rendered a program of new ragtime selections and ballads which received encores from the enthusiastic audience. Ell E. Stone, the newsboy, opened a hit with the song, "Alexander's Ragtime Band." Harry Pugh, Dan Quinn, Thomas Clifford, Thomas A. Quinn, Peter J. McLaughlin, Lew Benedict, Frank L. Dane and Sydney Dougherty, Jr., also will receive in the cast.

"Minnie St. Claire, The Girl from Missouri," is followed by Dockstader and Ireas in rapid fire comedy under the caption of "In a Brass Length at Bolsdale." The three Pendleton sisters performed some dancing specialties which brought forth round after round of applause.

The program closed by Dougherty and Benedict's drama of Western life entitled "The Wound Up." Hufter Dougherty, in the role of Slim Mover, the high constable of Bolsdale County, was the chief assistant with Ell Stone, playing the part of Pay Dirt, one of the Sour Mash gang, a close second. Others in the cast were:

Frank Dane, Joe Fitzgibbon, Lew Benedict, Thomas A. Quinn, Thomas E. Meagle, Frank L. Dane, James A. Donovan, Peter J. McLaughlin, Harry Pugh, William H. Wilkinson, Daniel J. Donoghue, Leslie A. Wedding, Hufter J. McDonald.

The attendance at the first performance stamps the National Theatre as an unqualified success. It is the largest theatre in Boston, having a seating capacity of 3,000.

Orpheum Theatre.

There was an anniversary program at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday in honor of the beginning of a second year under the Loew management. Among the performers were Chalk and Saunders, the Cali opera company, Bigelow and Campbell, the Waltbour Trio, John Menoff, May Dwood and Fennell and Tyson. New pictures were also shown.

Gaiety Theatre.

Another of the spirited burlesque entertainments that have made the Gaiety Theatre popular this season moved into the Washington street house. Cothran Gordon-North Amusement company presented "The Passing Parade," which delighted two big audiences during the day and evening. Like most Gordon and North shows there was an abundance of lively young women in the company, who kept the fun moving at a rapid pace. The show was scenically superior to most burlesque entertainments.

Howard Athenaeum.

The new week at the Old Howard brought out "The High School Girls" in all their merry ways. This show is made up of two burlettas, called "The Dude Pug" and "Old Trimmed Quick Rubes." Of course, there were a score of girls in the company.

Hub Theatre.

A new program of vaudeville and pictures was given at the Hub Theatre yesterday.

South End Theatre.

There was a banner bill at Lowe's South End Theatre yesterday, headed by the Great Poole, a magician of many attainments. Others on the program were Ed Raymond and Vera Hall, the O'Connor Sisters, Mann and Frank and the Aerial LaPorta. A new list of pictures was exhibited.

Scenic Temple.

A new program was presented at the Scenic Temple yesterday. It contained many vaudeville novelties.

Waldron's Casino.

"The Queen of Bohemia" dropped in at Waldron's Casino Theatre yesterday. The entertainment proved agreeable to burlesque patrons.

Plays That Hold Over.

"The Nest Egg" continues on its merry way at the Park Theatre. This is one of the most delightful comedies of American life the stage has had for several seasons.

"Over Night" began its final week at the Shubert Theatre last evening. There was a large audience.

Raymond Hitchcock and "The Red Widow" are drawing capacity audiences to the Colonial Theatre, where a lively musical play.

There is no lessening in interest in "Excuse Me," which began a new week at the Tremont Theatre last evening.

The third week of "The Round Up" at the Boston Theatre was begun last evening, with the big theatre well filled.

Helen Ware, who is starring in "The Price," entered upon her last week at the Hollis Theatre last evening.

Coming Events.

The new Plymouth Theatre will be opened next Saturday evening with a triple bill, made up of Synge's "The Shadow of the Glen," Murray's "Birthright" and Lady Gregory's "Hyacinthe Halvey." Seats will go on sale to-morrow.

The attraction at the Shubert Theatre next Monday will be the New York Winter Garden company in an entertainment called "The Musical Revelries."

"Get Rich Quick Wallingford," will come to the Park Theatre next Monday.

"The Man Between," will be the offering at the Grand Opera House next week.

"Why Smith Left Home," will be Mr. Craig's offering at the Castle Square Theatre next week.

"Elevating a Husband," will come to the Hollis next Monday.

Satellite Trips.

The steamer Satellite is continuing its daily trips to the fishing grounds through the month of September.

DR. M'KEAG TO HEAD WILSON COLLEGE

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 19.—Anna B. McKeag, A. B., Ph. D., head of the Department of Education at Wellesley and president of the Association of College Teachers of New England, has announced her acceptance of the presidency of Wilson College for women at Chambersburg, Pa. Dr. McKeag is prominent in Boston and in New England educational circles. She has been with the Wellesley faculty for ten years.

CAPT. SLYGARE DEAD.

GLOUCESTER, Sept. 19.—News has reached here from Denmark of the death of Captain John Slygare, one of the old masters mariners of this port. Captain Slygare was buried in Holsenburg, Greenland. His death was from pneumonia. He resided at 24½ Myrtle square.

COUNT MAY WED MRS. STINESS

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Count Sainte Croix de la Rouerie, commissioner-general of the French colonies to the coming Panama-California Exposition and one of the most accomplished of the French nobility, slipped into America aboard La Lorraine last Saturday. He admitted to-day at the Hotel Marlborough that he had purposely avoided interviewers to escape embarrassing questions which his married attention on the voyage to Mrs. Inez Sprague Stiness, a fascinating young divorcee of three weeks, might have provoked.

"You see," said the Count, who is a tall, well built man of forty and speaks excellent English, "You are so personal and I really feared I should blush if you pressed me.

Friends of the Count said last night that his engagement to Mrs. Stiness might be expected at any moment.

The reported engagement of the titled Frenchman to the young society woman recalls the remarks attributed to Mrs. Stiness when she landed Saturday. After remarking casually that "You have some gentlemen here, but in Paris they know how to treat a woman," she said:

"You see," said the Count, "I have many friends among the nobility in Paris, and no doubt some of them will perhaps propose to me if they fall in love.

"I like American women," smiled the Count to-day. "And particularly do I like Mrs. Stiness. We are the very best friends."

"I will say that the men I have met here know nothing of the way to treat a woman as I feel a woman should be treated. They are coarse in their actions, hours, one night or two. They do not know to give heart to heart talks as they make love. I understand how a thoughtful gentleman makes love. I went to a French convent, you know, and I had many friends over there before returning to America and becoming the wife of Mr. Stiness.

"New York is not attractive to me. It is only a way station on my trips to Paris. I will see it again soon; but that will, I hope, be the last time. Then Paris and my friends."

"If you met an American, cultured, handsome, a man of ability, a man who knew how to act in the presence of ladies, would you entertain thoughts of becoming his wife?" she was asked.

"Yes, I would. I would entertain the thoughts, but I doubt if such a man could be found," Mrs. Stiness answered."

SICK HEADACHES

CURED AFTER FIFTEEN YEARS OF SUFFERING.

Every Victim of This Disease Should Read of the New Treatment and Send for Sample.

For fifteen years, Mrs. John Webb, of Vinton, Gallia Co., Ohio, was a sufferer from sick, nervous headaches. That she is today entirely free from these attacks makes her story one of interest to every sufferer from this distressing disease. She says:—

"I suffered from nervous headaches for fifteen years and think they were brought on by overwork and study while I was teaching school. The pains were in the front of my head and through my eyes and every two or three months would become so severe that I would be confined to my bed for several days. I would get sick to my stomach and vomit during these attacks and would be so dizzy that I could not raise my head from the pillow. The headaches seemed to affect my eyes for a blur would often come before them.

"I was treated for a long time by two doctors and they told me my headaches were caused by overwork and by my stomach. Their medicines did not help me and I tried many other remedies without benefit. Through reading a booklet I decided to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People a trial and found after taking a few boxes that they were helping me. I took them until cured and do not know what a headache is any more. I have gained a great deal in flesh and feel well."

Unless properly treated sick headache is a disease of many years duration, as it occurs before the twentieth year in two-thirds of the cases and recurs more or less regularity until the fiftieth year or later. It is usually hereditary and is probably directly caused by defect in the process which changes the food we eat into blood. Most sufferers are troubled with obstinate constipation which makes it necessary to use a laxative.

A new laxative, PEPALETS, designed to be used in connection with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, affords a perfect combination treatment. These little laxative pills slightly stimulate the stomach and bowels and act on the liver. They are mild, sugar-coated, entirely vegetable, do not gripe and have no habit-creating tendency. A sample will be sent free on request together with our pamphlet on the treatment of sick headache.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

MANY HURT IN DUBLIN RIOTS

DUBLIN, Sept. 19.—A serious clash between police and soldiers and a mob of strikers occurred here to-day when railway companies attempted to put Sentch strikebreakers to work.

The strike-breakers were escorted by guards of police and troops. Strikers attacked the vanguard and in the battle which followed many were hurt by flying bodies. The rioters were finally dispersed.

A great mass meeting of the railway workers adopted a resolution in favor of a general strike on the Great Southern and Western, the Great Northern and the Midland Great Western, the three principal railways in Ireland.

The question of an increase in wages or better hours does not enter into the present troubles. The strike is due to the refusal of the three railways to accede to the demands of their employees that the railways decline to handle consignments of timber from firms involved in disputes with their employees.

Carters refusing to handle timber consignments are faced by detachments of police, but only one vehicle has been made to interfere with their peaceful duties, it is quickly superseded. The decision to call a general strike was notification today to the railway companies, connecting this the Great Southern and Western, with which the Midland Great Western cooperates, quantities of agricultural produce, poultry and other perishable freight have accumulated at the North Wall station, the company being utterly unable to handle the incoming supplies.

An organized attack on the station staff with the exception of the station master, has been made. Traffic is also suspended at Cork, completely tying up traffic.

The Orangemen have ceased work except on the Great Southern, which is almost completely tied up. Operations on the other lines are also expected to quit. Passenger traffic has been considerably affected, the Rosslare and Fish Guard services to England being completely blocked.

It is expected that Atlantic traffic from Queenstown will become seriously disorganized. Five Atlantic liners are due to-day at that port this week, and it is probable that the Carmania, due to-day, will carry all the mails for Liverpool.

SUYDAM TO ASK DIVORCE AT ONCE

Young Husband of Eloping Wife Announces Plans for Freedom.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Walter Lispenard Suydam, Jr., announced to-day at his home in Blue Point, L. I., that divorce proceedings will be brought at once against his wife, who eloped with Frederick Frederick Noble and Mrs. Suydam, from snapshot made in Central Park, New York.

Noble, son of a Brooklyn plumber. Mrs. Suydam, in her apartments at No. 82 West Twelfth street, where she and Noble were found after their flight from Blue Point, declined to make any statement about the proceedings.

It was only a short time before young Suydam told of his intentions that Frederick Noble declared to newspaper reporters that he intended to call on the police to protect him against private detectives who, he said, had followed him since Friday. Noble, according to the superintendent of the apartment house, left Mrs. Suydam shortly before 10 o'clock last night. He was not expected to return.

Noble's father, who is spending the week in the country home in Blue Point, near the place where the Suydams lived, insisted that his son had spent Sunday night at the Brooklyn home of the plumber. He did not discuss the question of divorce.

Parents Stand by Her.

"Have your parents discarded you as reported?" Mrs. Suydam was asked.

"Certainly not. They have done nothing of the kind," she replied.

Mrs. Suydam was then asked if she intended to stay in her apartment and if she had signed any agreement for the future with David A. Servies, the owner of the house. Both she and Mr. Servies, who said he had been asked to counsel the young woman, declared that she was at liberty to stay there as long as she pleased, and that no agreement had been drawn up or signed.

"There have been no developments," continued Mrs. Suydam. "I am thoroughly worn out by all this notoriety and I desire to be left alone. I am now living here by myself and, of course, enjoy the same privileges as any other resident."

While Mrs. Suydam made her statement a young man who said she reporters he was from a detective agency stood in the hall. He interviewed several tenants and then took up a position on the opposite side of the street.

Noble Not Discharged.

There were various reports that the story of the elopement had led to Frederick Noble resigning from the office of the Foster company, where he was employed at No. 475 Broadway, but the young man told Mrs. Suydam emphatically denied this report. Noble, who has been employed by the company, while his brother Wallace, who was at the office of the concern, answered that it was only a vacation.

Yet when Noble appeared at his office he was dumbstruck at seeing a young woman at his desk. Later this young woman was seen by a reporter for the Boston AMERICAN.

"In place of using my name," she said, you may call me Mrs. ——," and was summoned into Saturday evening and told to go on New York. I am to take charge of this branch and hold the fort until further orders from Boston."

Verification of the statement that Mrs. Suydam drew a large sum of money from a bank on the day before she left for Blue Point, both of whom were in the Patchogue Bank when she entered.

"She wrote a check for $12,000 and that amount was given to her," said Mr. Mersell, and Mr. Smith corroborated his story.

It was also admitted last evening at Blue Point by Mr. Suydam, Sr., the millionaire father-in-law of the runaway wife, that she had a large bank account in New York City.

Young Suydam, the husband, had a long conference with his attorney, Joseph Loser, yesterday.

Mrs. Suydam and young Noble met yesterday directly after the former had eaten breakfast. To all visitors they said they did not intend to quarrel or part.

"We love one another deeply," they said in chorus to the reporters. They spent the entire afternoon in Central Park, watching the ducks in the lake.

"Will you marry Fred Noble when you are divorced from Mr. Suydam?" was asked.

"I have not given the matter a thought," Mrs. Suydam answered.

From Washington it was learned Mr. and Mrs. John Jay White, parents of Mrs. Suydam, have closed their residence at No. 1,734 K street, Northwest, and have left the city to escape the annoyance occasioned by the actions of their daughter.

TROOPS AT KIEV; FEAR OUTBREAK

KIEV, Russia, Sept. 19.—Intense excitement prevailed in Kiev to-day over the death of Premier Stolypin and it needed but a single spark to set off a bloody disaster. Flags fluttered at half-mast over all the public buildings and over many of the private buildings, while thousands of crepe sacks and pod soldiers patrolled the streets to preserve order.

More than 250 arrests have been made, some for political causes, others merely on suspicion, but all relating either directly or indirectly to the intense situation which has prevailed here since Premier Stolypin died from the bullet fired into his body at the opera house on Thursday night by Dmitry Bogroff, the Russo-Nihilist.

Colonel Kulijakko, chief of the Kiev police, who was responsible for the presence of Bogroff at the opera house, was dismissed from the service to-day. Colonel Kulijakko had signed the passport admitting Bogroff to the opera house. Bogroff's aunt and her two daughters were arrested to-day charged with complicity in the revolutionary plot.

A heavy cordon of soldiers was stationed about the hospital to-day to prevent anyone entering who did not possess proper credentials. Clear weather arrived to-day from Tchernigoff. He hurried here to accompany the body back to the capital upon a special train. Take part of the program however, was in doubt.

Mme. Stolypin was prostrated with grief and under the care of physicians. No one outside the immediate members of the family was allowed to see her. Hundreds of telegrams and cablegrams of sympathy and condolence poured into Kiev and into the capital to-day.

An autopsy was held to-day upon the body of the dead statesman. The surgeons found that death had resulted from complications which followed the bullet. It is reported that poison had been smeared upon the bullet fired into Stolypin's body but this report could not be confirmed.

Jewish residents of Kiev continued their wild flight from the city. Many of them left all household effects behind. Others carried away what they could with them, but it could not secure sufficient money to pay railroad fare for all their families on foot.

Fully 7,000 residents of the Semitic quarter of the city had fled from their homes to-day. Panic spread over the entire city.

The only question as to the fate of Bogroff, the assassin, is the date of his execution. Although his countrymittal is not begun till to-morrow, it is a foregone conclusion he will be put to death. It is believed that many others will be executed in connection with the plot.

2 ALARMS FOR REVERE FIRE

Two alarms were sounded for a barn fire on the Summer estate of John H. Cauley of Charlestown at No. 101 Endicott avenue, Revere, early to-day. The still alarm blew sparks a quarter of a mile to Beachmont and over the Bellingham avenue section. The second alarm was sounded more on account of danger from sparks than from the barn fire itself. The barn was destroyed at a loss of $500. The Cauleys left their Summer home last week to return to town.

900,000 CASES IN RECORD SALMON PACK

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 19.—The pack of pink salmon on Puget Sound this season is expected to total 900,000 cases, or more than double the pack of the largest previous season, 1905. Almost the entire catch has been sold.

SHAW TRUSTEES SUE FOR TAXES

The trustees of the estate of Quincy A. Shaw entered suits to-day to recover from the towns of Milton and Brookline $21,000 taxes which they paid under protest last March, but which the Supreme Judicial Court has since ruled should have been paid to the city of Boston.

The trustees are Francis C. Welch, Quincy A. Shaw, 2d, and Robert P. Herrick. Their suits are filed with the Norfolk Superior Court at Dedham. The face of the suit against Milton is $15,000 and against Brookline $40,000. But the trustees seek to recover only $10,581.91 from each town. They say that this is the amount they were forced to pay to Milton, and that they want no more, with interest. In regard to the Brookline payment, they say that they were forced to pay $33,657.09, but that they seek to recover from Brookline only the same amount they ask of Milton because the balance of the Brookline money is due Brookline on other property.

PARADE CLOSES NEEDHAM FETE

The largest parade in the history of the town of Needham took place to-day, as the clamor and crowning event of the three days' celebration of the town's bicentennial.

There were more than three thousand persons in the procession, by actual count on boats and afoot. The line was three hours in passing and was witnessed by more than twenty thousand spectators.

The parade was led by the Needham military band, followed by the police force, the bicentennial committee and the G. A. R. veterans. Next came the Needham lodge, A. O. U. W., with 75 men in line, and a float representing some of the degree work of the lodge. Next in line was the Needham patrol of Boy Scouts, with a float showing a night's camping with an actual camp fire burning.

The First Parish Church had the prize float of the parade in a graphic representation of the 100th anniversary of the Indian relief selling the land upon which Needham stands to two inhabitants of Dedham, George L. Kingsbury, representing the Indian and John Lee and Ruth B. Mills, the two land buyers.

The largest single delegation in the line was that of the William Carter Company, which had over 400 of its employes distributed on and between eighteen floats, all portraying different scenes in the manufacture of their goods.

The various departments of Needham, Wellesley, Natick and Dedham were all in line with floats. The parade ended on the Town Hall, where it had started, and was reviewed by the bicentennial committee, who dropped out of line for the purpose of reviewing it, and by the invited guests of the town.

At 4 o'clock the big banquet, for which 400 covers had been laid, was served in the Town Hall. William M. Medley, chairman of the bicentennial committee, presided, and the speakers included Governor Foss, Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham, Congressman Weeks and others.

FAREWELL TO FATHER FLYNN

The parlors of the residence of Mr and Mrs. Thomas J. Mitchell on Peter Parley road, Jamaica Plain, were filled last evening with guests invited to a farewell reception held in honor of Rev. Charles Flynn, of Lansing, Michigan, who is ordained this afternoon on the Francona after a three weeks' vacation in this country. This is the second visit Rev. Father Flynn has paid the United States in two years.

Some of his present vacation days he spent in New York with old college friends. The past two weeks he was entertained at the Mitchell home, as he was on his previous visit to this country. He was also a guest of Dr. P. J. Timmins of South Boston.

Father Flynn is a splendid specimen of the ideal Irish parish priest, a true "Sagart Aroon," as the people of Ireland affectionately term their faithful spiritual leaders. From the very beginning of the Nationalist movement, thirty years ago, he was one of the staunchest colleagues of Davitt and of Parnell, and in all the vicissitudes of the land League agitation he took an active and self-sacrificing part. To a member of the AMERICA staff who was at last evening's gathering Father Flynn said: "My battle for Ireland is all but over. It only remains for the Irish races at home and abroad, he said, to present a solid front and the victory is ours. I have been so glorious a time with Mrs. Redmond and the Irish party have no fair confidence in the people at home, and the efforts of the Irish race in their support fill the end of the present battle.

"Asked when that will be, Father Flynn replied with emphasis:

"Within two years, or sooner, we shall have home rule. No power on earth can stop it now, except ourselves. The Tories and the Conservatives would like to see our national arms shattered once more by dissension, but they are going to be disappointed."

Thank God," said the patriot priest, "the Irish people have at last taken to heart the bitter lessons of the past."

COLLINS' RALLIES TO-NIGHT

ST LOUIS, Sept. 19.—A tramp comet which makes Halley's and other comets appear like imitations now is hovering 45,000,000 miles southeast of St. Louis, according to the Rev. Martin S. The head or nucleus is visible to the naked eye but to get a good view of the star Clinton Brown as the "tail of the dragon."

"God Bless The Man Who Invented Sleep!"

NO one but a victim of insomnia can realize the suffering, the despair that goes with sleeplessness. The more sleep lost the less able he is to sleep until it is no wonder that in his fear of ultimate complete breakdown he trifles with some dangerous drug, which while it stupefies, leaves the nervous system weaker than ever, and a prey to habit. The labels of most remedies for sleeplessness reveal coal-tar products and opiates as active principles.

Nelson and Nixon Both Sure of Winning Big Bout To-night

Nelson Looks for Victory

By BATTLING NELSON.

I have trained hard and faithfully for to-night's bout, and feel that I am going to win. I realize that Nixon is a tough young fellow and liable to give me plenty of trouble. It is my intention to go after him from the top of the gong, and if I can I will put him out in a few rounds. If I lose, I will be the first to congratulate Nixon on the victory.

Nixon Sure of Victory

By BILLY NIXON.

Battling Nelson will be the hardest fighter to beat that I have yet met. Nevertheless, I intend to keep right after him every minute of the bout. For the past two weeks I have been training daily at Highland Lake and I am in the best possible condition for the fray. If I win from the Dane I will go after the top notchers while if I lose I will have to do some tall hustling to get back into the limelight.

BY JACK CONWAY.

Boxing history will be made when Battling Nelson, former lightweight champion of the world, and Billy Nixon of Cambridge climb into the ring at the Armory A. A. to-night.

The record book will speak of the battle as the one in which the Durable Dane's pugilistic age set forever one of the luck he in which the conqueror of Joe Gans, the "old Master," crushed fight fans forever. He was now one "shellier" of days gone by.

Nixon, who will test the Battler's mettle, is one of the best boys of the present crop of lightweights. Billy has not lost a bout since he broke into the professional ranks further winning the majority of his battles in the 115-pound class in 1905. He has engaged in seventeen battles, making each of them by a knockout, four of them on points, two have gone to a draw and all the other four were no decision affairs.

With this sparkling record to spur him on, and with the knowledge of what a victory over a man of the Dane's ability and fame will mean to him, Nixon will fight his hardest to-night.

If he loses, his hopes of getting matches with the leading lightweights, like Gans, will receive an awful bump. He will have to start all over again.

The preliminaries are sure to be fast and interesting. In the semi-final bout, Joe Nelson of Lawrence and Henry Hall of Lowell will battle for the middleweights. Nelson, like his distinguished namesake, has an tremendous amount of pugilistic ardor. Hall is a peppy, hard pounding boy. Hester McInnis, he is one of the whitest black boys in town.

In one corner to-night will be Nixon with a youth, strength, cunning, a quick working mind and the other qualities that go to make up a good fighting man.

In the other corner will be the battle-scarred Nelson, experienced and right at home outwards.

Nelson will enter the ring to-night an unknown quantity, but when he goes to his dressing room after he will know definitely whether Oscar Matheus, Battling Nelson, has what it takes. Boxing enthusiasts will know whether a man even take the terrific punishing the Durable Dane has and still "come again."

Nelson has been a big drawing letter as far as an attraction is concerned since he lost a close decision to Myer Levy of Utica on November 26, 1910. The Dane took on Al Wolgast at Point Richmond, in a forty-round battle on February 22, 1911, and came away from the long end of the decision. Since he was defeated by Moran, the Dane has been taking things easy. He has had a long rest and says that he is in good condition. Nelson has lost to Gans at Goldfield, 90 per cent of the boxing fans said that he was all in, but he came back and won the lightweight title after a long rest.

Frankie O'Connor will meet Young Beebe and Henry Cassidy will meet Jack Phillips with Cy Goodwin in the preliminaries.

It is about time that some of these white "hopes" who are willing to step on the line about every other day should be tried out before they are given the real public test as real fighters. If something is not done to "size up" these contenders, the boxing game will go to pieces.

New York is about the smallest place for "bum" fighters to pick up easy coin. Matt Morris, the latest "hope" to arrive, cleared up over $3,000.

In writing about Jack Dempsey, the Salt Lake Tribune has everything a champion heavyweight should possess except a punch, speed, cleverness, fighting, footwork, and ring generalship, instead of that he was all right.

Packey McFarland is now looking for a bout of trouble with either Abe Attell or Matt Wells. The stockyard favorite has displayed a desire to meet the winner of the scrap between Abraham and Mathew, and as those two mitt dispensers know well that such a bout would pack the house, each reluctantly to said that he was willing to meet Packey.

BAN JOHNSON TO OWN SOX TEAM

By F. M. SMITH.

President Johnson of the American League is to become a magnate.

Boston baseball fans probably will sit up and take notice when they learn that the purchase of a goodly share of the Red Sox holdings by Jimmie McAleer, present manager of Washington, and Robert McRoy, secretary to President Johnson, will be the startling fact for B. B. to become an owner in, instead of the executive of, the young major league.

When this comes about, it is inevitable that there will be a big shakeup in the American League. A new president will have to be elected, and he in turn must appoint a secretary. Many interesting positions appear to be on the market, but with the keen foresight which enabled him to form the American League and make it one of the most powerful if not the most powerful in the country, President Johnson has covered his future.

Johnson Tired of "Bossing."

It has been known for some time Mr. Johnson has tired of his duties as executive and has been hankering for a chance as a magnate. When he started his war against the National League eleven years ago, it was his avowed intention to become a club owner in some future date. With the business acumen which brought the league from poverty to power, Mr. Johnson has picked out one of the real soft spots in baseball, and one which he knows better than Mr. Johnson that Boston is the best of the baseball towns in the country? that its fans like the game better, that the winner is given them they will support it until the cows come home.

When Mr. Johnson comes forward and takes up his residence in Boston he will be now in possession of John I. Taylor, he will be associated with the two men, McAleer and McRoy, whom he has known for years, and their business qualities and fidelity probably are known better to him than any one else.

As his successor, Harvey T. Woodruff, sporting editor of a Boston paper, appears to have the inside track. Mr. Woodruff is closer to Mr. Johnson in business as well as personal way than any other one connected directly or indirectly with baseball. They have been friends for years. Woodruff in business is a typical Johnson. Close mouthed and a wary guarding the interests of the man or men by whom he is employed, he has become known in Chicago as a "gumshoe."

Woodruff Fit for Position.

Woodruff, ever since he left the Chicago University, has been in the newspaper business, always on the sporting end, except for a short period as secretary of the Western Jockey Club, at the time of the racing war in Chicago. Though he is a man about thirty-five years of age, he has a college education and has a great faculty of "keeping his mouth shut" on things important. He would be a fine man for the position as president of the American league.

President Johnson, since the inception of the American league, has demanded of all baseball writers that they keep "mum" on inside matters which he claimed were for the good of baseball. The breaking of this rule has forced several clubowners to sever connection with the cause of which was unknown at the time. It is understood that Woodruff has selected Mr. Woodruff as his successor as president of the league, but will not have some one in his shoes whom he knows will keep the affairs of the American League of which there are a plenty.

It will not be surprising if Mr. Woodruff appointed to the position left vacant by Mr. McRoy as secretary to the league or business manager of the local team. Mr. McRoy has been looking after many of the doings of the league during the Winter months, and will be well fitted for the next position next Spring and take up the duties when it is cast aside by Mr. Johnson.

BAY VIEWS TO HOLD DANCING PARTY

The Bay View A. A. will hold its annual Autumn party and dance at Bethesda Hall, South Boston, on Friday evening. The association has a big following and a large amount of outdoor sport followers will attended. The club has done much to put the different sports on good footing in South Boston, and many good men have been developed on the club's baseball team. Two Sessions Daily for Crimson Football Squad

By TED PARKE.

From now until the college opens on September 28, two sessions daily, will be the lot of the Crimson football squad when working out for the hard season ahead on Soldiers Field.

Morning work was inaugurated to-day, the squad coming out at 10 o'clock and going through an hour's work under the direction of Paul Withington, one of Head Coach Haughton's most trusted assistants in the coaching line. Coach Haughton will usually not be on the field during the morning work, but this afternoon he will be present afternoon directing the drill of his Crimson forecyed charges.

The work this morning was of the usual routine order, quick starting, passing the ball, punting and catching and falling on the ball being in order, followed by a jaunt run around the field to the locker building. The drill this afternoon will be of the same type with a few "starting the dummy thrown in to the mix. The work this afternoon which will come along all too soon to suit either the coaches or players.

The big squad of fifty-two men that reported the first day's work was a great surprise to everyone concerned. It also is very encouraging for it showed that every man in college who is in the football game is out for the football team, and the success of the eleven sufficiently large to insure success for a couple of weeks prior to the opening of college and some one of the best teams in the land. Not for many years have so many men reported on the first day, and it will only show that every man on the squad realizes the stiff opposition he will have to buck against this year, both in finding men good enough to fill his place on the team, and from the other viewpoint of the schedule for the season. Many of the best Harvard has probably ever tackled.

A number of Harvard's last year's team men did not report yesterday for the first day, but will be out this week. The most prominent of these is Wendell, halfback last year and the All-America choice for this position. His ability is so well known that nothing serves to add to it.

Following is a list of the men who reported yesterday:

Centres—Emery, S. Hopkins, F. Hunt, Ingalls, R. Makepeace, R. Storer.

Guards—Curtis, R. Fiske, C. Foxy, H. Holt, M. Roberts, G. Stow, H. McGuire.

Tackles—E. S. Bigelow, H. Burling, O. Gleason, H. Lee, C. Mansfield, T. Parmenter, D. Prosser, G. Stillwell, A. Jacks, E. Spalding.

Ends—R. Bloomfield, R. Fabyan, W. Coolidge, R. Gallagher, S. Felton, P. Hollister, D. Howard, J. Mitchell, L. D. Smith, M. Tobey, W. Wetherbee.

Quarterbacks—R. B. Wigglesworth, R. S. Porter, H. Gardner, C. Blake, J. Callender.

Halfbacks—F. J. Campbell, W. Bright, J. Bryan, F. M. Bischall, J. Forestall, E. Grandelis, T. Hollis, C. Mellen, H. P. Pierce, G. Richardson, A. Sortwell, R. Walker.

Fullbacks—G. Bettie, G. Morrison.

Men not classified—R. Bacon, C. Dalton, R. M. Nelson, R. C. Proctor, L. Rothenberg, R. W. Sparks.

SHOWING OF ANDERSON PLEASES ELI COACHES

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 19.—Yale coaches are happy over the showing in preliminary practice of Anderson, the former University of Wisconsin halfback. He is in splendid trim but a considerable reduction must be adjusted before he is declared eligible. He will be one of Yale's first string slugging halfbacks if he is finally declared eligible.

Yale's list of eligibles is rolling up daily. It now includes Captain Hinkey, Bomeisler, Dunn and Wolfe, the last named three star members of the team of a year ago last year. None of them are with the present varsity squad. Head Coach Ted Coy still holds back on the scrimmage practice, but every available player has been ordered since last Friday and the making of the team Yale will play Lehigh here for its first game, a week from to-day, is well completed. Coy has also divided the squad into four groups for different preliminary drilling every day since Friday.

DARTMOUTH COACH ANNOUNCES LINE-UP.

HANOVER, Sept. 19.—Dartmouth's squad of huskies, swelled by new arrivals to about half a hundred, spent the morning session in light speed work, charging and carrying the ball. In the afternoon, after the regular short coalsthenic drill, Coach Bowles took charge of the squad and put them through a series of strenuous scrimmages, followed by signals and plays. Then they unlimbered the regulation signals for the first time and finished the session with a long signal practice, using four of the formations that Coach Cavanagh has devised.

Several veteran players reported, among them Ashwede, Bugbeiorn, Bigelow and Bardwell. The first team lined up as follows:

WESLEYAN TEAM STARTS HARD WORK.

MIDDLETOWN, Sept. 19.—Scrimmage practice by the Wesleyan team will start this afternoon. Coach Yorke announced to-day that in order to get the men in shape for the Yale game next week, Wednesday

A training table is to be established this week also. The squad of the present time is composed of twenty-four men, nine of whom are candidates for backfield positions. Coach Yorke is devoting particular attention to them, while Logan, a star line man for Wesleyan reserve last year, is coaching the rest of the squad.

PENN HAS GREAT STAFF OF COACHES.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19.—The University of Pennsylvania staff of coaches was improved to-day by the addition of Bucky Wharton, who was early announced as the man to have charge of the line men. Dr. J. R. Carnett, George Brooke and Gus Zeigler.

The work at Franklin Field yesterday consisted of a hard workout under the various star coaches, followed by the usual basketball game.

ARMY COACH HAS PROMISING MATERIAL

Head Coach Howard of the Naval Academy has picked out a number of members of the new fourth class who are promising football candidates. They will probably be given a chance for the regular team.

Among those are Collins, Alexander and Armstrong, all fast runners in the backfield. Overreach on the end and Decoode, Richardson, Howard and Berry at centre, guard or tackle. All of the four candidates for the line weigh in the neighborhood of 180 pounds each. The squad of newcomers is still being scanned for possible material for the big team.

PRINCETON HAS HEAVY BACKFIELD

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 19.—The Princeton football candidates had their first taste of real scrimmaging yesterday afternoon when two teams were picked and lined up against each other for a few elementary plays. The first team showed strength in the backfield but the line was weak. Penfield and Farr alternated at quarterback; Pendleton, DeWitt, Baker and Vaughn all played halfback, part of the time while Sawyer and Ormond each was given a chance at fullback. There promises to be a little more weight in the backfield than last year which pleases the coaches. The Princeton has not obtained the best results in depending upon speed alone during the past few seasons.

COLBY EXPECTS TO HAVE GOOD TEAM

WATERVILLE, Sept. 19.—The Colby squad grows larger day by day and the interest the freshmen show by getting here for early practice makes the outlook cheerful. To-day Hunnehall from Coburn Classical Institute, and Potter, another freshman, joined the squad, raising the number of 1915 men on the field to five. Weir and Joy of last year's squad also reported yesterday, and Coach McDevitt hopes to have enough men in a couple of days to start in scrimmage work. The practice was comparatively light but Trainer Adams says that most of the men are about fit, heavy work will begin pretty soon.

DAFFY CONTEST TO CLOSE SOON

The Daffydil Contest ends next Thursday night.

All Daffydils which are received up to and including next Thursday night will be considered for the awards which will be announced in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

Here are some received this morning:

If a starter fell off a battleship, would he be a submarine? Arthur C. Mills, No. 106 Glen street, Somerville.

If salmon is fish, is a crabapple? Maude A. Kelley, No. 192 Hood street, Lynn.

If the grass is wet, is Admiral Dewey? R. A. Mackay, No. 24 Harvey street, North Cambridge.

If an ad hen had a sore tooth, would the toaster profit? C. H. Frazer, No. 312 Prospect street, Manchester, N. H.

If the Symphony concerts fall to draw, will Music Hall? A. J. Preston, No. 53 Park street, Wollaston.

If a lumber strike, could a beanstalk? J. W. Publicover, No. 29 Herold street, Roxbury.

If a negro is dark, is an Israelite? Fannie Smith, No. 500 Robeson street, Fall River.

If the Boy Scouts formed in front of the City Hall, where would chowder form? Ida Collis, No. 19 Commonwealth street, Providence, R. I.

If a beefeater was hungry, could he get the "entree" off the ledge? William A. Mitchell, Jr., Exeter, R. I.

If a sheet covers a bed, what will the table cover? Fred Raftery, Taunton.

CHIEF BENDER HAS THE GRIP

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 19.—Chief Albert Bender, the phenomenal Indian pitcher of the Athletics, is ill with the grip and won't be able to take his place in the box for at least two weeks. The fans are fearing that the delicate Redskin may not be sound and strong for the world's series. With Bender ailing at that time, the chances of the Athletics winning the big games would be reduced.

Connie Mack professes to believe that Bender's illness is only a temporary embarrassment. He had intended to use the Chief in the double-header yesterday against Cleveland, but was forced to rest Saturday. After that the Indian was to retire and rest for the season. Mack had also intended to rest Coombs and Plank and the Indian, thus relying on a new delegation of pitchers. Plank and Morgan are going to work out of turn in order to have the pennant clinched as quickly as possible and the Athletics will finish the season with Dolberg, Krause and Martin doing the pitching.

The illness of Bender now on and most depression in the Mack camp.

LEACH CROSS DEFEATS PADDY SULLIVAN

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Leach Cross outpointed Paddy Sullivan by a wide margin in a ten-round bout at the Olympic A. C. last night. In nearly every round Cross showed his superiority by outfighting Sullivan all around the ring. Cross never showed better boxing form.

CAN YOU AFFORD TO MAKE CLOTHING MISTAKES?

I Can't— POSNER

STEIN-BLOCH $20 MODEL

IT is all very well for the man with the $10,000 income to step into a clothing store and take a chance on any suit of clothes that strikes his fancy.

He knows that he can afford to make a mistake—and throw away the suit if he finds it doesn't please him.

But with the $25 per week man—the man of prudent habits who wishes to dress well—the average man who feels that every dollar should count—it is a different story.

Such a man can't afford to make a mistake—can't afford to take any chances even on one suit. He must know he is right the first time—must exercise care and thought in selecting a suit.

It is for just such men the famous line of Stein-Bloch Clothes are designed and built. They are made from the very best woolens by the best workmen and in the very best styles that high-price draughtsmen can present.

All chances are eliminated in every Stein-Bloch suit before it is offered to the public. That is why I handle this line.

STEIN-BLOCH PRICE SCHEDULE

Suits	Overcoats	Eve'g Suits
$18 to $35	$18 to $50	$35 to $60

At a price that will appeal to any man—young or middle-aged—I have ordered specially made for Posner a full line of suits and overcoats. Don't imagine that because the price is low that the quality, style or assortment is to be questioned.

I can't afford to risk my reputation on poor goods. These suits are worth every cent of $20 —calculated on other dealers' standards—but the line sells at the Posner price of..... $15

If there is the least doubt in your mind about your next suit —give Posner's the benefit of it, and you will surely get one really satisfactory suit of clothes if you trade here.

HERE'S ANOTHER WHITE RACE HOPE

Boston has a white hope. He is the Great Barnes appearing this week at local theatre. W. H. Murphy, manager of the playhouse, and one of the most enthusiastic boxing followers in this city, is the Christopher Columbus in this instance.

Barnes is five feet eleven inches tall and tips the beam at 195 pounds. He is but twenty-one years of age, and he figures that in the space of the next two years he will fill out and weigh over 200. And Mr. Barnes has some confidence there is what he says about himself.

"All I need to learn is the scientific end of the game. I have been a student of physical culture all my life, so I would not have to start in by getting into condition.

"I should ready today be no into training for a fight with Jack Johnson, but I need the backing. They talk about Johnson having a skull that can be beat in by a punch. Why look at this! Then he bounced and pounded his skull with a perfectly good, solid club for six times. That shows that I cannot be hurt by wallops, and I will bet anybody $1,000 that Jack Johnson will not take a wallop over the head with a club that I will."

SPORT GOSSIP

By HARRY J CASEY.

The New York sporting writers must be shy on copy these days. One of them comes out with the announcement that Connie Mack will manage the Highlanders next season at a salary of $25,000. Listens good, but there is small chance of Connie going to New York, not as a manager at least.

The Highlanders will be out a barrel of coin if the Giants win the pennant in the National League. Therefore the Highlanders are the only team in the two major leagues outside of the Cubs that is not pulling for the Giants. The Hilltoppers and Giants had arranged for a series of games for the championship of Greater New York, which looks to be off as the Giants seem like the winners of the pennant at this stage of the game.

The Chicago White Sox are pulling for the Giants to land on top and are pulling hard. If the Giants do not it means a little extra coin for the members of the White Sox squad as they have arranged for a series of games for the championship of the Windy City. This will be almost as profitable for the Cubs as if they played in the world's series. And there is a chance that the Cubs will play for the world's series and not the championship of the Windy City, in which case there will be heaps of sorrow in the White Sox camp.

From a scientific point the coming bout between Matt Wells, the English lightweight champion, and Joe Mandot, the American featherweight champion, and in fact, champion of the world, ought proved to be one of the best ever held in this country. There is little doubt but what Mandot will inflict much damage on his opponent. Both are clever boxers, but of the two Attell is the cleverer. Wells will box at least 15 rounds with Attell when they step into the ring tomorrow night, and Attell figures to have the best of Wells and beat him easily. Abe Attell has long been considered the cleverest boxer who ever stepped into a ring, but nothing but a cold water, and would be delighted to see one of the following: Jack Monroe, Owen Moran, McFarland or Freddie Welsh. Any one of these would think nothing of giving the Englishman is a rugged fellow and will carry his attack right to you. He is also said to be a good one to read ring science, but Attell can box circles around him.

William McKenney, president of the Knights of Columbus Athletic Association, informs us that the first regular meeting of the bowling committee will be held tomorrow evening at the Shawmut alleys. No. 18 Bayleston street. The schedule for the coming season will be drawn up. The league will roll its first games on October 1. It is expected that a number of councils will be represented and that the league this season will be the largest in Boston.

The Detroit Tigers will be with us for the next few days. The Tigers are for the present the scrappy team, and with their first appearance here this season, they set back the Red Sox. Then on their last visit to this city was one from the start. They never recovered from the loss, there be sure to be a good crowd on hand each day to see the Tigers and Sox clash.

The latest blow, and one of the worst they could receive, is the announcement that the Athletics' star pitcher, Chief Bender, is ill with the grippe. It is said that he will be out of the game for two weeks and maybe longer. This will force Mack to use Coombs, Plank and Morgan more often than he has been doing the last few weeks. Connie was planning on giving Bender, Plank and Coombs a rest after this week, but the illness of the wonderful Indian pitcher makes this impossible.

Should the Giants manage to win the championship of the National League they are going to raise havoc with the throwing arms of Thomas, Downing, Stone, provided the latter gets into the world series. If these boys were able to put the Giants in the race this season it is their free running of the bases, wonderful aggravation of base runners and they are running the league well on most every catcher in the National League. Yesterday, against Simon of Pittsburg, the Giants perfected eight bases. Doyle and Snodgrass each stole three, while Merkle and Herzog managed to get away with one each.

COOMBS NOT IN BEST OF SHAPE

Today's article is the sixth published in the daily AMERICAN, crediting with the players who may figure in the world's series, by R. W. Lardner. One will appear each day.

By R. W. LARDNER.

Jack Coombs may not be as busy in the coming world's series as he was last Fall. If the Giants win in the National, connie Mack will probably start Plank in one of the battles instead of using only Coombs and Bender. However, Jack is sure to work in one of the contests and Philadelphia believe he can win in that role despite the fact that his record this year doesn't approach that of 1910.

Although Coombs and Bender have been with the Mack pitching staff, they are not at all alike in their styles of working. To the first place, Jack is an iron man. The more he pitches the better he is. Bender, on the other hand, is at his best when he doesn't have to perform more than once a week.

Coombs's great work and a lot to do with the winning of the American League title the last year, in the world's series, he pitched three full games and copped them all. He himself admits that Jack played a prominent part in two of his victories, but he deserved credit for his willingness to labor so often.

Coombs is a clever, educated pitcher in the country. When his control is good, he is practically invincible, but his habit of dealing out bases on balls gets him into lots of trouble.

Jack is over six feet tall and nicely built. He is still a young fellow and the best part of his career ahead of him. He will be married shortly after the world series last Fall.

Coombs is a well educated man and very popular, not only with his mates but with all the American League players.

He got his start as pitcher for the Colby College team. He joined the Athletics in 1906 and, in his career of that season, broke into the hall of fame by pitching and winning every game against the Red Sox. Since that season he has been mixed up in lots of long battles, among them being a six-teen-inning duel with Ed Walsh of the White Sox, in which neither of the contending clubs scored a run.

Besides being a wonderful pitcher and a good hitter, Coombs is a fielder that Connie Mack frequently sends him up in a pinch.

Malachi Kittridge, the veteran catcher, has the following to say about the Colby collegian:

"Coombs has become a great pitcher because he has mastered the greatest of all pitching assets, the drop ball that does not break. Some pitchers, like Mathewson, I don't mean one of those 'nut-drops,' but the kind that comes up to the plate squirrely in the center and falls from one to two feet, generally speaking, in lateral direction. Also a inside ball that ball and he can throw it with tremendous speed. Bender pitched that drop thing and mixed it up with a fast one in close, and the batter who could hit it with any regularity never faced. They tell me that Ramsey and other old timers depended on it extensively."

BERKELEYS DISPUTE CUBS 'TITLE CLAIM

The Berkeley A. C. of Cambridge disputes the Cubs' claim to the sixteen-seventeen-pound amateur championship title. The following letter has been received at this office:

"Sporting Editor AMERICAN:

"I see that the Cubs of Jamaica Plain have claimed the sixteen-seventeen-pound championship of the State. The Berkeley A. C. of Cambridge claims the Cubs on the latter's grounds this season and lost. At the time the Cubs agreed to play the Berkeley a return game, but now refuse. It looks as though they were afraid to play us. We are the only team that claims the championship title of the Cambridge-Boston district.

"Yours truly,
JOHNNY McDONGALL,
No. 521 Waverly street, Beachmont."

I WILL GET YOUR GOAT IF YOU READ THIS AD—
Melvin Williams

Before you go any further in this advertisement, I want you to promise me that you will have a suit built at Gale & Kent's provided I convince you that they are the best and squarest tailors in Boston.

I have your promise?

Then, listen to the rest of the story!

Suppose you start with your mind clear—your opinions unprejudiced. Just forget all that you have learned about Boston tailors and clothiers. Just imagine that you are new to Boston—a total stranger—and you are debating where you will have your first suit made.

I am assuming, of course, that you are not a ready-made patron—merely because I want this to be a friendly discussion.

You are going to a good tailor shop—choose some good fabrics—have a competent designer take your measurements—draft an individual pattern—and start work on a suit.

You know, just as well as I do, that every dinky little shop strung along Washington Street and Blue Hill Avenue away out to Mattapan Square—with a sign in the window "Gents' garments cleaned and pressed"—isn't a tailor shop.

Any one of these bushelmen proprietors can chop out an imitation of a suit—just as easy as a butcher can design a sprig of tripe.

But all of them put together cannot make a good suit of clothes—with style and balance to it.

On the other hand, there is a tailor shop at 96 Court Street, where they either cannot or will not make a poor suit.

Every suit built by Gale & Kent is made from a new and stylish design. It is cut by experienced cutters. It is sewn together by competent workmen.

The coat is tried on by the man who drafts the pattern. He adjusts all the little places—makes it individual in character—and orders it back to the finishing tailors.

When they finish a suit at Gale & Kent's it is a creation in cloth—a well-made, well balanced effort—something that a man can wear with comfort, and feel as though his clothes are away from the ordinary.

Now for the price!

Admitting that everything I have said is true—I might lose you as a customer for Gale & Kent if their prices were exorbitant.

The prices for suit (or overcoat) at 96 Court Street range from $15 to $25.

Between these two figures any man can find a pattern that will suit him—whether in brown, gray, blue, a mixed or in cheviot, serge, finished or rough-faced goods. They have all styles of fabrics at 96 Court Street.

There!

I have done my best. My job is over for today. The entire matter is up to you.

If you are convinced, then they will expect to see you at 96 Court Street, very soon, and don't be afraid to tell them that this advertisement brought you.

If you are not convinced, will you please tell me what you expect from a tailor shop, anyhow?

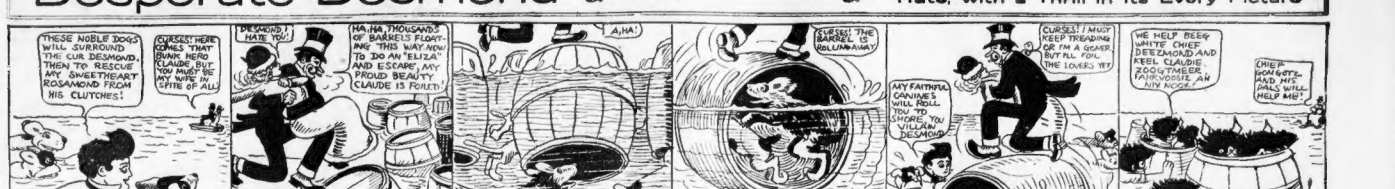
Desperate Desmond

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

A Continued Picture Drama of Love and Hate, with a Thrill in Its Every Picture



Claude Eclaire, hero, swimming along with the dogs rescued from the pound-keeper's wagon, sights Desmond, with the captive Rosamond, aboard the still unchartered steam roller, and heads for the scoundrel to rescue his sweetheart.

But it is hard to foil a villain of resource. Desmond sees a lot of barrels that have floated away from a wreck to barrel across the water, and promptly proceeds to "do an Eliza" by using them. He hopes to foil the dogs, as Eliza did.

Rapidly Desmond, with the helpless Rosamond in his arms, hops from barrel to barrel across the water, gaining headway loudly as he thinks how easy it is, but he does not know the dogs are after him.

As Desmond jumps on the top of a floating barrel he finds it rolling away beneath his feet. It is impossible to keep getting ahead, and he has to keep going in order to maintain his balance. Little do they think the dogs are in the barrel.

Now Desmond has to keep running madly to avoid going backward off the barrel, and even then he is being slowly but surely rolled toward shore. Claude now apparently has Desmond at his mercy and hastens to capture him.

"I'm the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond, "and Gougers is my pal!" The wild men are swimming rapidly after Desmond, the great White Villain, and will help to foil Claude. As to their success, see to-morrow's paper.

Married Life the Second Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

A Benefit Concert at the Summer Hotel, in Which Helen Takes Part

THE elevator boy James had been seriously hurt. When the car fell he was in it alone, except for the heavy trunk he was taking up. At the fourth floor the cable broke and the car came down with a crash. He had been badly cut by the shattered glass and his leg was crushed under the trunk.

For several reasons he had been with the hotel, and the regular Summer patrons had come to know and like his good-natured, freckled face and cheerful "Good morning."

And now they were getting up a concert for his benefit. Mrs. Stevens, who was one of the oldest guests, had charge of the program and had insisted that Helen should sing.

Helen had a sweet, clear voice, though she had sung very little since her marriage. She had always shrunk from singing in public, but as every one seemed inclined with the spirit of the concert and of raising some money for the injured boy, they were all willing to do what they could, and Helen felt she could not be the only one to refuse.

The Night of the Concert

The dining room was to be cleared of tables, the chairs arranged in rows and the management had offered the use of a rough platform. The admission was to be fifty cents. Every one entered into the preparations with a zest for relief from the dull monotony of a Summer hotel.

Saturday, the night of the concert, the guests were all requested to finish dinner by eight o'clock, so the waiters would have time to clear the room by a quarter to nine, the hour appointed.

Helen was dressed in a simple, white lingerie gown, and with her cheeks flushed with excitement, looked very sweet and girlish.

"My dear, you look charming!" effused Mrs. Stevens, when she ran into Helen's room for a few last touches before dinner. "There!" as she stooped over to pin a white rose in Helen's soft, brown hair. "You could pass for a sweet girl graduate. Now remember, you'll have to sing an encore. The program's so short, we'll all have to do much as we can."

Warren Is Affectionate

"Oh, but I'm so nervous. I'm almost frightened! It's been so long since I've sung at all—and before all those people!"

"It's much easier to sing before a lot of people than before a few. And you look so sweet, it won't matter much how you sing. Now remember, you're fourth on the program. I'm going down now to see about the tickets," and she hurried off.

Then Warren came in, looking very big and handsome and well groomed. Like many men, he hated to get into a dress suit and compromised on a tuxedo when the occasion was not too formal.

"Really, Helen?"

Helen flushed with pleasure. "Kitten" was one of his names for her, used only by her and one he rarely used now. With a woman's quick intuition she knew he was because she was becomingly gowned and looked unusually young and girlish. The desire to make him admit this, to bring him out of his somber mood, was irresistible, so she asked softly:

"Do I look all right, dear?"

"Fine, rare!" Which from him was extravagant praise.

Impulsively she ran to him and laid her flushed cheek against his cool, starched shirt front.

"Be careful! You'll get powder all over my coat."

Helen Panic-Stricken

"No I won't. Do let me stay here a moment. I'm so frightened about singing. I want to feel some of your strength," and she put her hand to his shoulder and tugged at his suspender, a trick of hers to which he submitted with the indifference of a big Newfoundland dog toward a child playing with its collar.

"Oh, dear, I'm almost sorry I promised to sing. If I should break down it would be dreadful."

"Nonsense! You'll do as well as the rest of 'em," and he shook her off and examined the back of his coat for traces of powder.

"Oh, there is a little; just a wee bit. Wait," and she reached for a brush, which she brushed off and, picked a long, shining hair from his sleeve, straightened his tie and then drew his head down and kissed him on the neck.

Warren's usual tolerance he submitted to these attentions. There was a thrill of mingled joy and pain in Helen's heart. Was it only when she looked particularly attractive that he was willing to be spurred over?

Downstairs

Yet how little difference his appearance made to her. Her love was always the same. Whether he was in a bathrobe, a smoking jacket, without his collar and in his shirt sleeves, or in full evening combination, or warm and dusty and travel stained; to her nothing mattered. It was the man she loved.

"Now come on down. Don't stop to kiss any more," as she turned to the mirror for the finishing touches to her hair. "You're all right."

Downstairs they found everything in the buzz of final preparation. Almost all the seats were already filled, and Mrs. Stevens in her black chiffon evening gown was sweeping officiously about, radiant with the success of her plans.

The first number was a piano solo by Miss Haskell, the second a mandolin duet by two college boys, the third a darky song by Mrs. Whitman.

Helen, who was sitting beside Warren toward the back of the room, slipped a cold little hand into his. As the time for her own number drew near her heart beat faster and faster. What if she should break down—become panic-stricken before all these people!

Although it was only an informal benefit concert, yet she could not have been more frightened nor could it have seemed more vitally important had it been her debut in grand opera.

Helen Sings

Then Mrs. Stevens announced: "'A Summer Night,' a soprano solo by Mrs. Warren Curtis."

Warren released her hand with a strong, comforting pressure, and rose to let her pass into the aisle.

When from the little impromptu platform Helen caught sight of the room of faces everything blurred before her. How she sang that first song she never knew. As a matter of fact she did not sing it very well, and the applause that followed was for more a tribute to her delicate, girlish appearance than to her sweet soprano.

But when she started De Koven's "Will o' the Wisp" out of the blur before her she had enough self-control left so that her look in his steady, steel gray eyes? Disappointment?

Forgetting every one else she now sang to him. The nervous tremor had left her voice and it was rarely sweet and clear; not powerful, but with an unusual, plaintive appeal. With each verse there seemed a sweet cadence in her notes, and when she finished it was amid wild applause.

As she hurriedly stepped from the platform there were cries of "More! More!"

Mrs. Stevens caught her and drew her back.

"Anything, anything!" she whispered. "The fellow I heard you singing to Winifred the other night. Sing it just as you sang it then."

"Winifred's lullaby! Could she sing that to all these people?" Helen hesitated. It seemed swept on by the exultation that was in her, and the eager expectancy of her audience.

She had won them! She could feel that. For the moment she was filled with a rare sense of power, of assurance, of a daring confidence in herself which she had never felt before.

With her hands clasped before her, she began the quaint, chanting lullaby with its rocking, murmurous refrain, that has something wistfully haunting in its monotonous rhythm. And she sang it now as she had never sung it before, and would probably never sing it again.

Helen's Moment

Life gives us a few rare moments in which we are swept to the very heights. Moments in which we live—intensely, vibratingly, gratefully! The remainder of the time, with more or less discomfort, we merely exist. And to Helen this was one of the moments.

When she finished there was a tense silence, stronger than any demonstration. Then the storm of applause swept her back to sing the last stanza again and still again. Even after the third time there were still cries of "Once more!" as she made her way back to her seat.

Mrs. Stevens had to rap repeatedly before she could secure the hush of command to announce the next number.

Helen felt Warren's hand reach over and take possession of both her own, as he stooped over and whispered to her, with a note of love and pride and possession in his tone which she had not heard for months:

"Kitten, my little kitten!"

LOTS OF SOFT, FLUFFY, LUSTROUS HAIR AND NEVER ANY DANDRUFF.

You can double the beauty of your hair in ten minutes with a little Danderine

When you see a head of heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, you can at once conclude that that man or woman is using Danderine, because nothing else accomplishes so much for the hair.

Just one application of Knowlton's Danderine will double the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately destroys and dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, don't hesitate, but get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine—any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now? A 25-cent bottle will truly amaze you.

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments

JOHN MARTINDALE volunteers for five years' missionary service in fever-stricken Cambula and thereby sacrifices, temporarily, the fulfilment of his love for Clemency Wentworth. Conrad Tring, his close friend, declares he was intended for a pirate, not a parson, and warns him against the dire possibilities of Cambula. He bids good-by to his sweetheart and goes to meet Mrs. Katherine Saxe, wife of the head of the missionary movement in Cambula, whom he is going to take out to her husband. He arrives in town only to find a letter from Mrs. Saxe postponing their meeting. In a restaurant, while re-reading a letter, he looks up to meet a woman's eyes. She speaks to him and it turns out she is Mrs. Saxe. He recognizes her as a girl he had known as Kitty Lomax, who, before her marriage, saved his life when he was dying of fever.

Kitty tries to dissuade him from going to Cambula, but he will have none of her arguments

THEY had passed out of the room together, and as they paused on the edge of the pavement she slipped her hand under his arm and the pressure thrilled him with an odd sense of intimate pleasure.

For the moment the intervening years seemed to slip from him. They stood together, boy and girl, on the edge of the Great Adventure. Then, from the passing crowd, there started up a face that brought the man back with an almost unpleasant abruptness to the present—the face of Conrad Tring.

Tring in London! Martindale made a movement forward, but Tring, lifting his hand in pressure, and rose to let her pass into the aisle.

When from the little impromptu platform Helen caught sight of the room of faces everything blurred before her. How she sang that first song she never knew. Helen felt Warren's hand reach over and take possession of both her own, as he stooped over and whispered to her, with a note of love and pride and possession which she had not heard for months:

"Kitten, my little kitten!"

It had already shown him rifts in his own powers of endurance; even the gay, irresponsible Kitty's temper had suffered. The only person apparently unmoved by the horrible, humid atmosphere of the coast town was John Saxe himself. Kitty's husband belonged to the big, blond type of rather silent man. As yet Martindale had never seen his imperturbable temper ruffled, though delay after delay of a fractious nature seemed to have occurred to prevent them making a start up-country.

He rubbed his damp hands desperately with his handkerchief. If this was the climate of the coast, what might he expected from the interior? But despite the fact that he was in discomfort in addition to pain, Martindale was eager to leave. Ondara. The delays in starting up country that left Saxe unmoved chafed him. He longed to be settled finally and irrevocably in his solitude, to feel his shoulders set to under the yoke of hard work.

The truth was, he had found the voyage out distinctly unsettling—the proximity of ship life that had thrown him continuously in the company of Mrs. Saxe. Kitty was one of those women who absorb your thoughts—he was perfectly frank with himself about it. He had never yearned for a moment in his loyalty to the woman waiting for him in England, only he was conscious that this other personality that had come into his life at a time when he was peculiarly sensitive to new impressions and for the moment dwarfed all other interests in it.

Was Not Alone

He turned back from the edge of the veranda and saw for the first time that he was not alone. Mrs. Saxe was sitting at the far end; the light of the moon, still in its first quarter, hanging low in the sky, touched the outlines of her head and shoulders. She might have been a figure carved in silver, he thought as he glanced toward her, she sat so still her attitude was so absorbed.

He drew back into the shadow without speaking; as was inevitable, they had started about a little since landing. On shore the Kitty he had known was merged in the Kitty of the great adventure. But he wondered of what she was thinking. Wonder always entered largely into his thoughts of Kitty, for despite their intimacy he was always conscious of some innermost recess of her mind into which he had never penetrated—some barrier past which their talk might never pass. The impression that had come to him the first day in the Simpered's bar had never left him. Kitty had spoken seldom even casually of her husband; the intervening years of her life between Wyndrose and to-day were a sealed book to him. She had never spoken much of his future, but never of her own.

Sometimes he had wondered if she was unhappy—if her reticence veiled common sense, what was there to make her unhappy? He was provincial enough to find it difficult to dissociate millions and villainy; the first hour he had spent in John Saxe's company had been enough to dissipate that notion. John Saxe was a splendid man, a husband any woman might be proud of, and, obviously, wholeheartedly in love with his wife.

Their Eyes Met

It was ridiculous—there was nothing to make Kitty Saxe unhappy—yet, even now, as he glanced at her, he could have fancied that there was more than a hint of dejection in her absorbed pose and there was something in the look that stirred him unaccountably. She rose and came toward him. "I didn't know you were there, Jack. Have you been dreaming, too, in the moonlight, or is it too hot even to dream?" she asked.

There was a languor in her voice, as though the influence of her own dreams was on her still; the heat had blanched her face, but its pallor enhanced the wistful beauty of her mouth, the delicate pencilling of her long, straight brows. Her woman's beauty had never made such appeal to Martindale as in that moment; he looked away from her almost guiltily, and it seemed to him that the silence about them was suddenly transformed to a tangible thing, a deeply tranquil one, and watched and waited.

"What's that?" The tension had been snapped suddenly by the sound of many feet trampling into the yard below. He went over to the veranda rail and looked down, conscious that his voice had been curiously constrained.

Mrs. Saxe joined him. Into the yard were trooping numerous native figures in cotton dress; as he looked some of them began shuffling and dancing grotesquely to the sound of drums that rent the silence incessantly.

"They seem to be here to make a start to-morrow, I suppose," Mrs. Saxe said. "These are the Krooboys, our bearers and porters, and the headman who have come to keep a farewell vigil with them. Well, we start to-morrow—that means you will see your people married very soon, Jack," the martyr's halo gleams in their minds. And you are glad, I make no doubt of that, Jack, for I have come to the conclusion that you are not human, even lonely men seems to have no terror for you. The loneliness that is full of voices and unsatisfied desires."

ONE afternoon the lady organist in a small market town in Ireland brought her English visitor to see the church. The sextoness (who was also organblower) was requested to blow for a few minutes until the visitor passed her opinion on the instrument. After some time Mary stopped blowing and came to the front of the organ.

"Shure, miss," she said, "won't you be after letting this lady hear what we always blaw his Riverence out of toe vestry wid?"

Troubles of Working Girls

By ETHEL WRENN

"UNTIL general living conditions in the big cities are materially changed there is no chance for a large number of working girls in them to make a decent living. It is human nature to get people to work for you for as little as you can. It isn't the fault of the individual employer. It is the fault of the system.

"The working girl problem will never be solved with charity boarding houses. A self-respecting girl wants a chance to make a little more than enough money to hold body and soul together."

These are a few of the ideas of a working girl of working girls. She is Miss Janet Weissman, bookkeeper for a firm of cloak and suit makers. She makes a good living and is saving herself, but she is in a position to know the conditions that prevent many thousands of other girls from doing as well.

At the outset it should be understood that Miss Weissman has no panacea to sell or give to the world.

"I will take an older and wiser head than mine," she says, "to bring about the necessary changes in a sure and practical way."

But, sifting what she told me, down, her chief idea is that the condition of thousands of working girls in the big cities is due entirely to congestion of population. There are thousands more to take the places of those who drop out.

"But, surely the organization of the women's trade unions is making for better conditions all the time," I suggested.

Only in Skilled Trades

"Only in the skilled trades," she replied. "If only every girl that can make a shirtwaist, but look at the time the shirtwaist makers had in their strike. There are thousands and to spare. If they struck it necessary to manufacturers, but I do not see that organization would help them any. There are always any number of girls that can be taught to do the same work in a short time.

"For instance, any girl can learn in a few hours how to pack shirtwaists away in boxes. Hundreds and hundreds of girls were thrown out of work by that strike, but manufacturers would not be inconvenienced for more than a day or two. Hundreds more are constantly being added and do make things that any girl can do.

"You would say that not every girl can address envelopes. She must write a good, legible hand. Do you know what the highest pay for that work is in most cities? one dollar a thousand. If a girl is very fast and strong in the wrist she can make as much as $6 a week.

No Word of Criticism

"I think, in a way, that much of the minor oppression of the clean girl worker is due to thoughtlessness, although the real cause is the cheapness with which the labor can be bought. I had a younger sister who, a few years ago was glad to get an advertisement for help at a store. It was during the rush season and it was understood that the work would be uncertain from day to day. She worked one day and was told she would not be needed the next. She was told to come down for her pay in the morning and they would tell her when she would be needed again. She went down and received fifty cents. There she had spent twenty cents in carfare, and if she had had to buy her lunch her work would have netted her about ten or fifteen cents.

"When she went down again I told her to explain this to the man who hired her and insist on getting her pay the same day. That is the only way girls like that can never thought of the two trips meaning two-fifths of the girl's pay.

"I would say to the world say one word of criticism against the many noble women who are devoting their lives to working for girls who are oppressed in the struggle for a living; but many of them do not fully understand how short a distance into the week the little money that some of these girls make will go. There are one or two lunch rooms that I have visited that are for working girls, but to get a substantial lunch a girl must pay twenty-five or thirty cents. Six lunches a week at that rate would mean at least $1.50 out of a pay check of $2.50 or $3.00. You can see that this is impossible.

"And it fits in with what I said before. These girls do not want charity. They want a living salary. Virtue, I believe, is largely instinctive; but the instinct of virtue is likely to go to sleep when the instinct to eat and wear warm clothes grows too strong."

Look to Your Sons, Also

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1911, National News Association.

In your article in the AMERICAN, "Look to Your Daughters," you seem to overlook the fact that the same parents also bring forth sons as well as daughters, and that the best protection parents can give to their daughters is by proper upbringing of their sons. All the conventional safeguards in the world will not protect the virtues of womanhood, as long as we continue to bring up our sons with greater liberties than we extend to our daughters.

This so-called double code of morals, one steel bound for woman and the other of rubberized elastic for men, is the real and only cause of a woman's ruin.

It takes two to make a bargain, AND A WOMAN FALLS BECAUSE OF THE PASSIVE PERMISSION SOCIETY GIVES TO THE MAN. IF IS THE WOMAN THAT REAPS THE RESULTS OF THE IMMORAL OATS THE MAN SOWS, NOT THE MAN.

Parents forget that the free moral standard for their sons is bound to involve somebody else's daughter, and that the immoral life of somebody else's son may involve their own daughter.

Parents of America, if you would protect the virtues of your daughters, you must impose the same moral restrictions and penalties upon your sons. LOOK TO YOUR SONS.

Very sincerely yours,

HERMAN DRUCK.

THE subject matter of our correspondent's letter has been frequently discussed in these columns.

Fathers and mothers are woefully and almost wilfully silent upon subjects of vital importance to educating their sons.

Youths are expected to learn life's lessons through experience, and girls through intuition.

If the youth wanders into dangerous and unwholesome paths he is to find his way back, wiser and better, and no one is to censure him for his mistakes.

If the girl goes astray she is to be regarded as naturally vicious, and shunned forever afterward.

Nevertheless, a gradual modification in public opinion has come regarding these matters in the last score of years.

The erring man is not received into homes with the same cordiality as he was if once made him as a social lion, and the erring girl has ten opportunities to find her way into useful and respectable avenues, where of old she found only the convent, the grave, or the asylum for the insane.

It is beginning to be understood, thanks to the tendency of medical science, to study causes and effect, that erring men pay penalties for folly as well as erring women. The sowing of wild oats, it is discovered, in the majority of cases, leads to the reaping of an unending harvest of disease, not only to the sower of the oats, but to his sons and daughters, and grandchildren, and great-grandchildren. It leads to early death, to puresis, to softening of the brain, and every other malady invented by mortal folly and ignorance.

These are appalling FACTS; but the intelligent and sensible parents of the day are giving their sons the opportunities to learn these truths, before they send them forth to battle with the temptations of life.

Nature is not so partial in the bestowal of her favors or her penalties upon the sexes, as the world has believed.

Yet so subtle and long deferred oftimes are her penalties for masculine immorality, and so immediate and open are punishments for erring women, that it is impossible to make one standard of morals for the two sexes, until there is universal intelligence and universal knowledge of physical, mental and spiritual laws.

As intelligence and education have increased and spread in the world, during the last hundred years, we can only believe that it will continue to increase, until, in time, stupidity and ignorance will be the exception, instead of the rule, as now.

While we are waiting this slow development of humanity, there is the imminent necessity of GUARDING OUR DAUGHTERS.

The Best Way

And the best way to guard them is to INSTRUCT THEM.

Ignorance is a poor protector of innocence.

Begin with the little girl of seven years, and teach her that her lips and cheeks are too pure and dainty to be kissed except by caresses of the woman who happens to admire her. Make her understand that her body is sacred; the temple of her soul; the grail of her life. And always give her an ideal of wholesome sweet womanhood, meant for the holiest uses of wifehood and motherhood; teach her to respect herself as the mother of the coming race.

At the age of fifteen, crown her with the completest comprehension of the laws of life and birth; and so protected and guarded by this understanding, that she will be incapable of allowing her soul or body to be soiled by immorality, as she will be incapable of uttering a profane word.

Knowledge is protection.

"Does he offer any proofs of his affection?" asked a father.

"Proof!" exclaimed the beautiful girl. "Well, I should say so. Why, he says that I have set his heart afire, and it has been burning so that it has lit the cigars he carries in his vest pocket."

"But the proofs?"

"He showed me the half-burned cigars."

HORLICK'S

It Means Original and Genuine

MALTED MILK

The Food-drink for All Ages.

More healthful than Tea or Coffee. Agrees with the weakest digestion. Delicious, invigorating and nutritious. Rich milk, malted grain, powder form.

A quick lunch prepared in a minute. Take no substitute. Ask for HORLICK'S.

Others are imitations.

Oh! the humiliation of it!

No Blemish as Great as Superfluous Hair

Any woman annoyed by superfluous hair on face, neck or arms ought to use RADIOX. It is as safe as the most delicate face powder. RADIOX removes the hair by dissolving it—the skin and dissolves hair as readily as warm water does sugar. There are no after effects. The hair cannot grow again. The process cannot be detected, as the hair becomes dissolved and therefore cannot be absorbed by the skin.

Stop annoying with disappointing remedies. The best proof of our claims is a bottle of RADIOX. Sold by druggists everywhere.

Special introductory offer: Send 10c. (stamps) to all Rike-Kumler Drug Stores, Houghton & Dutton and other department stores and drug stores, and we warn you against attempts to substitute, see that you get RADIOX. Or the Rubsi Incinerator, in the yellow package.

GREET TAFT IN SAULT STE. MARIE

ST. MARIE, Mich., Sept. 19.—President Taft received from today from Marquette city, in the form crossing the straights of Mackinac, and proceeded to Sault Ste. Marie. President was awakened at 6:30 a. m. and with Senator Smith and congressman Townsend, who accompanied him on the way from Marquette, went to the upper deck of the barge. It was a glorious morning and the President immediately enjoyed it.

President Taft made a brief talk upon his arrival here. He met being on his scheduled itinerary. He visited the Soo, lake trade and congratulated the town on its prosperity.

The President, who was thoroughly tired after making eight speeches in Detroit, was refreshed after a sound sleep and declared he was ready to enjoy himself into his speechmaking. At Sault Ste. Marie the President was met by Governor Osborne.

WARD TELLS OF SPEEDY FLIGHT

JAMES J. WARD—Flew fifty-four miles to Corning in 53 minutes. Stopped to replace broken. 54 miles from New York. May resume flight today.

CALBRAITH P. RODGERS—Wrecked his biplane when leaving Middletown, but was not injured. Expects to make repairs there and take to the air again tomorrow.

ROBERT G. FOWLER—Repairs being made on Cox biplane. Starts Thursday for New York.

EARL OVINGTON—Arrived in New York today to prepare for the flight. Will set out September 23 from this city.

Fowler Unable to Start.

COLFAX, Cal., Sept. 19. Robert G. Fowler, marooned here awaiting repairs for the rear section of his biplane, which was broken six days ago, said today that he expected to leave Thursday morning to continue his transcontinental flight. Hopes that he might leave today disappeared when it was learned that spare parts were not shipped from Dayton, Ohio, until Saturday. "Once over the mountains, I'll show them some speed," he said to-day.

By JAMES WARD.

CORNING, N. Y., Sept. 19.—It is slightly how trouble is pursuing me on this trip. Before I was in Corning, just fifty-four miles from the spot where I landed on Saturday night, when I ought to be at Buffalo, I was forced to alight. It is certainly thought I should be able to get into Canada but evening. When I saw that I would think that a new $2,000 Curtiss motor would go wrong on its oiling system and go on the blink. Well, it has done just that.

Fowler, Rodgers and myself have suffered a lot of delays, but I suppose we will get going again pretty soon now, and we certainly have had the hoodoo after us, so it. The speed I have maintained in my flights the last week only confirms me that even with a handicap Casey delays I can get on and can easily make the coast within the time limit. I can get the old Curtiss machine going smoothly now, I don't know whether I will have to have a new engine or not, but even if I do I guess we can get one up from Hammondsport. That is where they make the Curtiss plant is located, and get it installed within a few hours.

"I am going to make a heroic effort to get to Buffalo tonight some time today, when I do I'll throw the engine wide open and make a try for all I'm worth.

Believed Troubles Over.

I was absolutely sure yesterday when I started that my troubles were all over. I felt I would have nothing at all to do but fly my way. I did not think that anything else could happen to retard me.

I have been lost for a day; I have been a prisoner on account of weather, and I have smashed my machine. Now with this almost immovable motor breakdown I begin to wonder if I am even the luck of my woes. I can't think of anything else that could happen to me. Well, I guess my troubles have not dampened my desire to get through the flight one bit. That is the part of the trip does not weary me in the least. It is these enforcing delays that injure my energy. But I do certainly feel encouraged by the splendid time I made on the mechanical end I am practically obliged to look after all the mechanical details.

The duties of the mechanic end I am practically obliged to look after all the mechanical details myself, as I can't rely on any special help for Fowler and Rodgers. They are both amateurs and I guess that sometimes are many miles behind me. I have no help myself, as all these men have to keep on with the flight. I don't care. I am going on. I am going to continue this flight until I get to the Pacific Coast. If it takes three months I certainly will. I have agreed with Mr. Hearst's $50,000 prize, but if I don't get through I don't get the money. I am going to try to get through in order to be the first to fly across Lake Michigan.

While I flew yesterday I had a truly glorious time. The motor and new propeller gave me wonderful speed. There is no question but that the Curtiss machine that came from the Southwest did not suffer from the trip.

It is easy to appreciate my average speed of 54 miles an hour when I tell you that I made the distance between the four cities between Oswego and Elmira in just fifty-three minutes, according to my official time.

I want to explain here, so that it may be understood in the future, the official time is the time that I left one station and arrive along the Erie. They are putting me through the mails. I am carrying a part my aeroplane to the chief dispatchers of the various cities I pass over, and official time.

I want to say right now how much I appreciate all the courtesies shown me along the Erie. They are putting me through the mails. I am carrying a part my aeroplane to the chief dispatchers of the various cities I pass over, and official time.

I must earnestly wish to thank the Erie people for their disinterested helpfulness. I hope to show that I can think of them that they have not done readily and with alacrity. I appreciate their favors and am a debt of gratitude.

I have dropped up from the ground at Owego I felt as if I was bound to get to Buffalo last night, but I didn't. Well, I immediately shut the humming little engine down. Then the speed was so that the cannon on the planes sang like a harp.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Pine strain, heretofore regarded as a nuisance and burned by the acre, is coming into its own. It is found in many Florida counties that are for one reason or another unable to make immediate extractures use of the trees for turpentine and rosin. Automobilists who are familiar with them are inclined to favor straw-colored tires if they are well kept, over highways made of clay.

The announcement that Jackson will build a $1,000,000 factory for the exclusive use of the Hall-Scott motor has created considerable interest in the State. Like other Michigan counties which have been very backward in the past, Jackson is fast taking a leading active. It requires time to overcome the handicap of the past, but the company, some of the departments in Jackson are already taken as an indication that the buying season is going to be one of the biggest in the history of the automobile.

An application of a proper oil is considered a good thing for a Ford car, according to chiefs. Castor oil is universally used, and is good when the engine is completely drained in it over night. This will cure a case of harsh clutch, but after that it is useless. He is only a lack or adjustment of spring tension.

* * *

In a recent experimental car contest at Los Angeles the truth that a motor truck is the truck to buy for long service was demonstrated, and it was noteworthy that the contestants who finished with the least trouble were those who had been breaking the ones who had the least amount of fire fighting.

Of fifteen trucks in the contest, two were equipped entirely with the Goodyear hard rubber base tires, and the fact that these finished first in the percentage column speaks well for that make of tire.

Of the five Goodyear equipped trucks, two finished with perfect scores and the other two suffered only slight penalties for mechanical troubles. The fact that only five trucks in all were equipped with the best evidence that the run was a most trying one and put the contestants to every test encountered in actual service.

Did You Ever Hear of "a Face Swollen With Sleep"?

Do You Know Why So Many Crave Strong Coffee in the Morning?

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

If a grown person or child comes downstairs late, some foolish individual says, "What a good sleep he has had! His face is swollen with sleep."

The face is swollen, indeed. Many grown people, and more children, wake in the morning with their faces puffed up and their eyes heavy.

But it is POISON, and not sleep, that has caused the face to swell. Nine hundred and ninety-nine Americans out of a thousand suffer from poison every night of their lives—many suffer from poison both night and day.

And this poison, which does more than everything else to shorten the lives of human beings, more even than consumption, is the poison that men themselves create.

The body, in the processes of life, creates poisons which are carried to the lungs by the dark, venous blood, and there taken out of the system by the air that the lungs expel.

With every beat of your heart the blood starts on its journey pure and clear. It travels through your body, cleaning every cell, every particle of tissue, carrying the impurity to the lungs.

And the fresh air which enters your lungs clear and pure goes out again loaded down with impurities, WITH THE ACTUAL POISONS THAT THE BLOOD HAS COLLECTED FROM THE BODY AND SENT OUT THROUGH THE WONDERFUL MECHANISM OF THE LUNGS.

The poisons that the body exhales are deadly poisons. Carbon dioxide sent out from your lungs is a poison.

Faces are swollen in the morning, the brain is dull in the morning, because the person in sleep has been breathing in again the poisons exhaled instead of breathing in fresh air.

Ninety-nine one-hundredths of all human beings poison themselves with their own poisons.

They sleep in rooms tightly closed, and not a few actually sleep with bedclothes over their heads.

This especially happens to children whose parents allow them to entertain fears of ghosts and other fears, and then refuse to give them comfort by letting the light burn until sleep comes.

Such children cover up their heads in terror, sleep the night through with heads covered, poisoning themselves with their own poisons, and wake up with a swollen face that is foolishly attributed to sleep.

Keep your windows open. In warm weather sleep out of doors if you can—the pure air cannot possibly hurt you.

Allow no draught to blow upon you while you are sleeping, for the cold air blowing on the skin keeps the nerves active and troubled, it keeps the heart at work to supply heat to the spot attacked, and under those conditions sleep is not sound.

Sleep free from draught, but sleep in fresh air. Make sure that throughout the night your lungs and your blood are supplied with the pure oxygen that carries the poison from all the cells of the body into the lungs to be expelled.

Don't poison yourself with your own poison. If you go into your child's bedroom in the morning and the air isn't as fresh there as it is out of doors, you are committing a crime against that child's health.

Remember that of all the remedies against the excessive use of strong coffee and of strong drink, physically speaking, fresh air is the best.

The man who feels that he cannot begin his day's work without a dose of strong coffee simply craves coffee because it fights against the poison which he has taken into his system at night.

Remember that. It will be worth a great deal to your health, and to your children's health.

You may be compelled to breathe bad air in the daytime, while you earn a living. By night time, at least, fresh air is free, and you can have it if you will—even if you have to sleep with your head out of the window and put a nightcap on your head.

A Simple Way to Prevent the Stealing of Pictures

Any Electrician Could Install It, and It Would Not Cost Much

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

It appears that more than three hundred paintings besides the "Mona Lisa" have been stolen from galleries of the Louvre in Paris.

It is probable that many other galleries have suffered in the same way. Here is a suggestion humbly offered:

At the back of every picture establish an electric connection with the wires going through the walls. Arrange the connection so that any interference with the picture, any attempt to remove it, will cause the ringing of a loud alarm in some central guardroom, indicating the number and location of the picture that has been touched, and also ringing a bell in the room in which the picture is located.

Police could be sent from the central alarm office, and the watchman on guard nearest the particular picture could hear the bell ringing in the room adjoining the picture.

In France, and everywhere else, the smallest shopkeepers arrange their front door so that it cannot be moved without ringing a bell to warn them that somebody is coming in.

It would not take any great ingenuity to arrange pictures hung in public galleries so that to move them, or even to touch them, would instantly betray the purposes of the thief.

Boston's Fire Protection

There is something to be said on both sides of the interesting and important discussion now in progress concerning our municipal fire protection.

Mayor Fitzgerald and Commissioner Daly are both right on some phases of the question. It is clear that the duties of a fireman require great physical strength with respect to the handling of the heavy ladders at a fire. His duties require even brute strength as distinguished from physical agility. Now it is true that all large men have not greater brute strength than all small men, but, as a general rule, the larger the man the greater his muscular strength, his power to lift and to pull and to strain and to twist.

Among the applicants for places in the Fire Department, undoubtedly, there will be many small men who have superior strength in these respects to some other applicants who are larger. But in laying down a general rule which will bring larger men into the department, Commissioner Daly is adopting a course which is calculated, in the long run, to give us men who can do the heavy work of the department at a fire more efficiently.

Naturally, political friends of the smaller and weaker men oppose Mr. Daly's course, but he is right, and the AMERICAN hopes that he will stand by his course on this particular question.

On the other hand it is not clear that Boston ought now to make any considerable increase in its appropriation for the Fire Department. The city is already maintaining our Fire Department at a cost much greater than the cost of fire protection in other comparable cities of America and Europe.

This fact alone justifies Mayor Fitzgerald in refusing to consent to a further increase in the cost until some other method of giving us further fire protection, which is supplementary but different in character to the present method, has been tried. It is high time that we heeded the old-fashioned precept "that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

The Mayor's determination to weed out the fire traps and the ramshackle buildings in the city, which are a source of danger from fire, is wise. These old, tumbled down buildings are the source of economic waste and of social and physical danger. They are veritable sore spots in the community.

Generally they are held in the grip of the dead hand of unenterprising capital, placed in the control of trustees. They often occupy valuable land and prevent the land from being utilized to the highest advantage of the community. They are a cause of loss of taxation and of social and economic service, while, on the other hand, they are a cause of increased public burden from the necessity for greater fire protection and greater health protection to which their existence gives rise.

It would be a wise plan to inaugurate a movement against these offensive and unserviceable structures even if their abatement would not be a direct source of economy in the expense of our fire department. Consequently, Mayor Fitzgerald is doubly justified in his proposed crusade against such buildings. If their owners were required to bring them up to date, they would soon tear them down altogether and erect in their place new and clean structures which would serve the needs of the community to the highest advantage and burden the community less with the problem of protecting them from fire and protecting those who use them from the dangers attending upon their unsanitary condition.

It is not surprising that Commissioner Daly should recommend an increase in the appropriation for his department. It is a habit almost universal among head of departments, and it is especially to be expected from the head of a fighting organization like the Fire Department.

If we should ask the military commander of our national forces what he would recommend to increase our national defenses, no one would expect him to make any other recommendation than that the military and naval forces be increased and raised to a higher level of efficiency. He would be an odd soldier if he suggested that the causes of war be eliminated by propagating peace societies.

The Mayor's attitude in this situation is sound, and if he loses the friendship of those who wish to distribute and to receive the proposed new jobs in the Fire Department, he will gain more friends among the general public.

Little Lessons in Vaudeville

By MILES OVERHOLT

(Man mowing lawn at 4:30 a. m.—Neighbor with head out of window.)

N.—Hey, there, fellow! Put the soft pedal on that sleep annihilator. You're ruffling our tranquility.

M.—Your tranquility be ruffled. You smart guys can't sleep, I suppose, without them fancy nightshirts on.

N.—What are you mowing the grass for this time of day?

M.—Me? Why, I'm catching the grass before it wakes up. It's easier to cut when it's asleep.

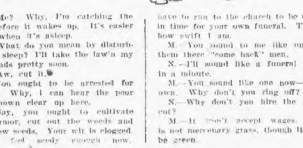
M.—What do you mean by disturbing our sleep? I'll take the lawn my own hands pretty soon.

M.—Aw, cut it out.

N.—You ought to be arrested for cruelty. Why, I can hear the poor grass mown clear up here.

M.—Say, you ought to cultivate your humor, cut out the weeds and plant new seeds. Your wit is clogged.

N.—I feel seedy enough now.



M.—I'll soon have to run to the church to be there in time for your own funeral. That's how swift I am.

M.—You sound to me like one of them there "come back" men.

N.—I'll sound like a funeral knell in a minute.

M.—You sound like one now—your own. Why don't you ring off?

N.—Why don't you hire the grass cut?

M.—It won't accept wages. This is not mercenary grass, though it may be green.

N.—I feel seedy enough now, thanks. But go ahead with your suggestions. If you think I ought to be raked, why don't you come up here and do the job? You are the boy I'd get take in town.

M.—You talk like a graphophone.

With that the neighbor slams the window shut and goes to bed, while the mower continues on his merry way, unless the constable arrests him for beating his board bill, or something, in which event we have no jurisdiction.
